Public Comment on Draft Environmental Imp	oact Statement on BLM Herbicides

Dear BLM, my name and address are: _____

I oppose your plan to increase use of pesticides. I support ALTERNATIVE ONE – no herbicides – because all of the other alternatives would increase the use of pesticides, including the deadly 2,4-D and the carcinogenic Diuron.

I protest the fact that your DEIS did not include an analysis of the inert ingredients and relied on a Bush-Administration legal definition of the term "drift" that eliminated the consideration of vapor as drift.

I protest that you pretend to offer five alternatives but admit that numbers one and two are "only for comparison."

I object to the fact that your 'Proposed Option, Alternative Four', would change your current authority "to spray only noxious weeds" to have new legal authority to "spray all vegetation", including at schools on leased BLM lands, campgrounds, and picnic areas. Children before profits!

Mental Health Disaster

Lane County shuts down a cost-effective service

ane County Health and Human Services recent surprise massacre of all programs of Oregon's oldest and most successful peer-run mental health agency, SAFE, has caused little stir save for maybe those several hundred mental health "consumers" and trauma survivors who were helped by the services. Many of these consumers were people served by Valia, a modest SAFE-owned Medicaid program that kept clients well supported in the community. These outreach services were designed by peers from adapted clinical principles. Valia's services were also shaped by values the system is supposed to promote, though seldom achieve: individual

However, talking about those few hundred consumers doesn't acknowledgethe national attention. Advocates and consumers everywhere still want to know how Valia's choice-based and creative use of resources stack up against an antiquated Medicaid system. More particularly, many wonder why the county never even asked about the outreach service innovations and measurable outcomes, talked to the current clients or even so much as visited the Valia facility while it existed.

How public funds are now used. Medicaid mental health funding is still at the mercy of an often costly and recovery resistant pharmaceutical regimen. Mostly it wants to pay for exotically expensive drugs, hospitalizations at $1,000 a day or office therapy at up to $287 an hour. Valia's outreach alternative costs 25 percent of that current county office rate. "Peer" providers everywhere are interested in competing for those funds in a system that truly values outcomes and recovery instead of learned helplessness.

Recent research shows community-based mental health care, as opposed to the institutional care favored by Medicaid, significantly reduces the risk of suicide. SAFE's statistics validate this and are much higher than the county average - it has only lost one client with whom it had worked intesively in its entire history, and this happened after the county closure notice forced termination of the client's counselor. Sadly, the county hasn't even bothered to collect Valia's data.

Public and private agendas. Some of Valia's affected "clients" were also some of the same people who showed up at an April town hall forum covering the planned closure. In a series of dramatic presentations, they asked Rob Rockstroh, county Health and Human Services director, to explain why he felt Valia's Medicaid services absolutely must go. Backpedaling from the obvious popularity of the program which both Kitty Piercy and Bill Morrisette at the same meeting called exemplary and a "service that had to be saved," Rockstroh, who has final authority on any closure, promised in front of 80 people and CTV cameras that no other SAFE programs would be affected. Because it was just a matter of "paperwork compliance," just the fee-for-service program Valia would be retired.

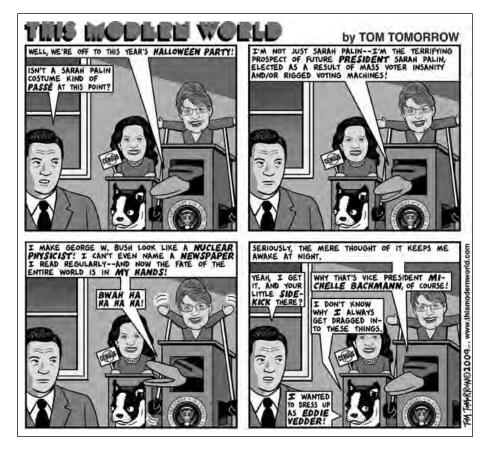

The backdrop to all of this is that Valia, two weeks later, had to file suit to stop its closure mostly because the county refused an independent examination of the errors in the site review used for closure.

So, frustrated since April by slow negotiations and with a looming court examination of any county misdeeds, Rockstroh did an "end around" of the court case. On Sept. 14, without any apparent concern for the clients, Rockstroh cut off all funding and destroyed SAFE even before its day in court. The county's "weapons of mass destruction" approach withheld thousands of dollars already owed and all future payments, citing contract "emergency clauses." The county justified its actions by suddenly alleging $50,000 Valia spent of its own money on client needs, i.e. housing, medications, transportation, emergencies and food, somehow now constituted a "misuse of public funds." Paperwork previously reviewed was suddenly so out of compliance that the county immediately must act. Facing a large payroll, the cash-flow impact collapsed SAFE instantly, immediately eliminating outreach services to about 30 high-risk clients as well as others. An unjustifiable disaster.

Public accountability. Rockstroh's reckless decisions in creating this situation shouldn't go unaddressed. Calmer voices at county administration were overridden when he pulled the trigger that destroyed forever an entire organization which had simply asked for an impartial hearing.

Rockstroh, by some estimates, by diverting staff and other resources, has now spent more than $200,000 of taxpayer dollars to force the closure. And all 27 persons now unemployed at SAFE's drop-in center and Valia evidently paid an extreme price for standing on principle for their constituents and work. Perhaps its time for county HHS to show what principles they are promoting here.

LETTE'S TO THE EDITOR

TO THE TASED STUDENT

From the hearts of the concerned and compassionate citizens of Eugene, I offer to you our sincere and heartfelt apologies. Please know that our city's pride lies not in the actions of our culturally incompetent and seemingly corrupt officials, but rather in our hope that Eugene be recognized as a welcoming and understanding community.

We are sorry you've become a victim of the rampant overuse of Tasers infecting Eugene's Police Department. Their actions mar our vision of a beautiful city, and now we, the concerned citizens, find ourselves once again having to pick up pieces of a botched situation handled with inappropriate force.

The citizens of any municipality deserve to believe their police are upholders of the law, but once again their disappointing actions have shattered that dream, tainting the brass of their so-called "shields." Regardless of what happened at your residence that horrible night, I would like to recognize that the fault lies not with you. The burden of guilt falls onto the shoulders of irresponsible property management, an overly Taser-anxious police force, cultural incompetency and an extreme case of miscommunication.

Did they attempt to bring in a translator to communicate with you? Did they even consider the fact that you were afraid, confused and upset that people came to your residence and trespassed for no reason at all besides their own incompetence? I pray that you are able to heal and recover from the horrific trauma of Taser abuse. I wish you the best in returning to your studies, if staying in Eugene's something you decide to do.

Please do not judge our fair city on the actions of our rogue police. We are a welcoming, loving, respectful and diverse community, and we can all hope that someday Eugene's finest will realize that as well. It will take just leaders, a Civilian Review Board that represents honest oversight (not just police interest) and a whole lot of time to recover from this tragedy. I implore the leaders of Eugene to lead us in the right direction. For too long now we have been traveling down a dark path and innocent people are being abused. I am sorry to you wode zhongguo pengyou (my Chinese friend). May you overcome this nightmare, find peace and realize your dreams.

MILLING THE MONEY

The Seneca biomass wood burning plant is the real clunker. What a mistake by EWEB and LRAPA! And how ironic to see those cute children on television claiming that LRAPA is providing them with clean air to breathe when the American Lung Association in their 2009 report claims that almost half the Lane County population suffers from breathing our air pollution. Maybe because today's rain does clean the air they have the nerve to put such commercials on TV and ignore the additional 500 tons of pollution Seneca will add to our air pollution problem.

Taxpayers will be subsidizing dirty air to breathe and using a very inefficient method to produce electricity. Efficiency for electricity from biomass is 15-25 percent, coal is 45 percent and natural gas is 60 percent. How could LRAPA compare air pollution to burning slash when they should know that slash is a valuable nutrient of soil for growing healthy trees and shouldn't be removed from the forest? I believe everyone understands that this is a money grab for stimulus money from taxpayers. A biomass plant in Massachusetts is to receive $400 million in public handouts. How much for Seneca? It is a horrible deal for the public.

NO IMMINENT THREAT

In response to Jim Byrd's letter, there is one major flaw in your logic behind police Tasing Ian Van Ornum. When the cops arrested him, there was nothing quick about it. According to witnesses, after the cop was "threatened," he told Van Ornum to get out of the street or he would be arrested. The officer then left. Later the police returned and arrested Van Ornum, leaving the water can behind. If you watch the footage on youtube.com/user/PictureEugene you can see the water can was nowhere near Van Ornum while he was being arrested. It is clear there was ample time to ask questions before drawing weapons.

PARANOID RESPONSE

After carefully reading Jim Byrd's "Tasing Required" letter, it is quite clear to me that both he and some EPD officers are paranoid. The biggest mistake made by American police chiefs is to issue Tasers to paranoid police officers.

SPANKING THE WEEKLY

Charles F. Thielman (10/15) starts spanking the EW for running its "Fetish Fun" cover by asking a rhetorical question: What would a 10-year-old think? He assumes the image will cause the child to grow up become an Abu Ghraib torturer. But wait a minute. I imagine that a 10-year-old understands make believe very well, especially during Halloween season, and sees that adults too can and do dress up in costumes and play-act for fun.

And come to think of it, kids seem to have an inordinate interest in spanking in any case, whether or not Mom and/or Dad practice corporal punishment. Why is that? Certainly most 10-year-olds in the Eugene area could read the accompanying article and understand it. Instead of trying to prohibit images, a parent could use the cover as the starting point for a discussion about the norms and diversity of physical sensuality, and the similarity as well as the difference between pain and pleasure, and the true nature and ethical meaning of consensual human activity.

Chuck Kleinhans Eugene

PROJECT CLEAN

Regarding "Solar Jobs See Cloudy Forecast," (News Briefs, 10/1): Dreams like the re-opening of Eugene's Hynix plant as a solar factory can seem impossible. Especially in our current situation where we lack the economic and political support necessary to make them a reality. We need to make the U.S. a competitive market place for renewable energy technologies like wind turbines and solar panels.

In doing so we will ensure that we are on track to reduce our global warming pollution by at least 80 percent by 2050. We can create green jobs, manufacture renewable energy technologies and stop global warming by demanding that our elected officials stand-up for Oregon's future. It starts with each of us urging our Congress members to pass strong climate legislation. Right now, the Senate is considering the Boxer-Kerry Clean Energy Jobs and American Power Act. We need both Sens. Merkley's and Wyden's support on this act to ensure that we are energy independent.

We can develop, build and manufacture the clean energy technologies here in Oregon that will repower America with clean energy. We just need to make sure our representatives are listening to our cry for independence.

SVIRSKY'S AGENDA

Although Gila Svirsky is co-founder of Women in Black and chair of B'Tselem, she did not appear in Eugene to support those worthy organizations but to promote a political agenda — a "two-state solution" for the Israel/Palestine impasse based on the Geneva Initiative. This model is deceptive in intent, projecting an image of fairness while designed to protect Israel from its perceived "demographic threat" by preserving a Jewish majority. Israel has long hoped to isolate Palestinians within an Israeli-approved mini-state with limited autonomy and to forever deny their U.N.-declared right of return to their homes.

Svirsky suggests that Israel admit responsibility for the refugees but allow return of only a few for "humanitarian" reasons. The words justice and equality are conspicuously absent from the proposed two-state solution, and, as our own Supreme Court determined, separate is never equal. What she and organizations such as Tikkun and J-Street recommend amounts to a segregated Bantustan system.

Svirsky's racist proposal that "Some Palestinian refugees could be absorbed by other Arab countries" (as though all Arabs are culturally interchangeable) went unchallenged by Eugene "peace community" members in attendance. These refugees are Israel's responsibility alone, and return to their stolen homes was a condition of Israel's 1949 admittance to the U.N., which they have never honored. Sponsorship of such speakers by secular peace and justice organizations is inappropriate. Svirsky's message is just as offensive to Palestinians and human rights activists committed to justice and equality as are racist white separatist speakers sponsored by Pacifica Forum.

FAIRMOUNT DORM HEARING

There is a hearing coming up about a UO dormitory development in the Fairmount Neighborhood along historic Moss Street. The hearing will be from 1 to 2:30 pm Nov. 10 at the UO Longhouse (just east of the Knight Law School). After a site change and numerous delays, the new 400-450 student dormitory may be sited on top of the last large UO parking lot near the 1600 block of Moss Street.

Our grandparents started Lochmead Dairy 67 years ago. Today, four generations of our family run our farm, operate our creamery, and sell our milk and ice cream at neighborhood Dari Mart stores. We milk our cows in Junction City, and within 48 hours, the milk is in our stores—now that's fresh! When you come to a Dari Mart, you'll always hear a friendly hello. Flagging Desire, Part II

've been on a quest to become one of those DayGlo-vested women who stand along the highways directing traffic.

Ya gotta have a dream!

I want into the traffic flagging profession. But it's not that easy. Turns out you have to be certified to even apply for work, and you need special training to get certified, and it's nearly impossible to find flagging trainers.

My years of networking for the LGBTQ cause have taught me to keep pushing and never give up. I called the local utility company who directed me to the Oregon Department of Transportation who suggested contacting the community college Road Safety Program who sent me to the offices of the County Workforce.

I showed up early and waited in line. I talked to an intake worker, filled out forms and took a computer assessment of my skills and experience (none very relevant to the traffic control field). Finally, someone handed me a purple sheet of paper listing local flagging trainers.

I dashed out the double glass doors, victorious as a contestant on American Idol. I wasn't going to Hollywood, but I was on my way to the next round in becoming a Road Warrior Goddess, aka traffic flagger.

Nobody was there to cheer me on. My domestic partner, for some odd reason, isn't enthusiastic about my intentions to work in speeding traffic with nothing to protect me but a vinyl vest and a hand-held STOP/SLOW sign. Go figure.

Not one to let the voice of reason slow me down, I took my purple paper and set about the task of getting trained and certified. The listed flagger training company I was most interested in – guess why – was Beaver Flagging. No lie. What dyke wouldn't want THAT on her resume?

Oregon is officially "The Beaver State" – only part of my motivation for moving here in the 1970s. Our OSU team is the Beavers – just one of OSU's many recruiting enticements. But I learned from Beaver Flagging's website that it's owned by two women who share a last name. The Beaver sisters. Sounded like lesbian code to me.

I got Beaver Flagging's voicemail and left a message that felt oddly like a "Why I Want to be Miss Universe" speech. No call back. I tried half a dozen times over the next few days, leaving earnest requests explaining my desire to be trained by – and maybe someday work with – the Beaver sisters. No call back. Those must be some busy Beavers!

I kept trying until my call was finally answered. In a weary voice the woman said, "You have the wrong number. There's no Beaver Flagging here." And she added, maybe to soften the letdown, or to ward off a bad joke, "I get these calls all the time."

I hope the Beaver babes haven't gone out of business or moved on to some even higher calling, if there is such a thing. Beaver Flagging – a name I'd be more than proud to wear on my reflective safety vest. If I ever get to wear one.

Stay tuned for the saga of award-winning writer Sally Sheklow's continuing pursuit of happiness.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

the new 400-450 student dormitory may be sited on top of the last large UO parking lot near the 1600 block of Moss Street.

The proposed dorm design includes an underground tunnel to the new Nike arena, which also raises questions about whether this dorm is being designed specifically for athletes like the opulent new "learning center" on Franklin Boulevard. Removal of the last large UO parking lot and encroachment into the Fairmount Neighborhood with the proposed Moss Street dorm site ensures that this project will exacerbate the increasing parking and livability problems in the area.

The Nike arena is already leading to significant impacts on the Fairmount Neighborhood. There are a growing number of poorly planned and unfunded projects in the UO development pipeline like a $30 million to $40 million dollar indoor track (site is unknown) and an additional expansion to Autzen Stadium. Careful scrutiny of this ambiguous and little known dorm proposal may lead to a more reasonable UO development agenda. SUSTAIN-A-BULLSHIT

Neal Spangler's critique (10/1) of my letter (9/17) opposing false dichotomies reinforced dualistic frameworks that distract from understanding our predicaments.

The fake debates between alleged opposites — Democrat/Republican, good cop/bad cop — are part of a psychological warfare against the public that ridicules examination of political collapse. Nothing the Republicans have done in recent decades could have happened without the collusion of the national Democratic party. The Democrats refused to impeach either George Bush. They helped cover up political assassinations (JFK, MLK, RFK), the 1980 October Surprise, Iran-Contra, 9/11 and the peak oil motive for invading Iraq. The Democratic Party died in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963. See www.oilempire.us/ fake-debate.html

The D's have nicer rhetoric than the R's, but neither political party has launched any meaningful climate initiative, nor will they admit we are at peak oil.

The Clinton/Gore administration managed to shred as many environmental laws as Reagan/Bush, mostly because environmental groups are too partisan to object when "their side" does bad things. Most environmental groups are quiet about Eugfield Springene's billion dollar highway expansion plan, Gov. Kulongoski's $18 billion highway expansion plan and Obama and DeFazio's $500 billion transportation bill.

Torrey didn't start any sustainable initiatives, but Mayor Piercy claims "carbon credits" can make the city of Eugene carbon neutral, so there's no need to stop widening highways. It's sustain-a-bullshit.

If you were lost in an unpleasant place, would you want a map of Disneyland or a map that told you where you were?

Mark Robinowitz Eugene

EARN EMPATHY

In reference to Dane Smith's letter, "The Giant Awakens" (9/24): Like Smith, "I took my education seriously. I applied myself seriously. I worked hard for my money, my home," and yet unlike Smith, I don't believe such effort gives me the right to turn my back on those less fortunate.

There's nothing special about hard work. Lots of people without health care work hard eight or more hours a day for minimum wage. When I was a child, my mother occasionally looked at a transient or some other ill-fated person and remarked, "There but for the grace of God go I."

Those are good words to remember and live by. Success is a gift, and at the end of our lives there aren't any pockets in a shroud!

Don Healey Eugene

BLIND SPOTS

A SUV was parked several feet from the curb on the wrong side of the street, a ticketable offense in Oregon. Running to the passenger side door, a boy darted out from behind the car right into the middle of the street, directly into the path of a moving car. Thankfully the driver had time to swerve — just another close call because of someone parking the wrong way.

very well could have been (and thankfully wasn't) Hart's 4-year-old mauled instead.

As the owner of a jovial 70-pound black lab, I've seen several examples of small children getting sideswiped or knocked over by dogs on accident. I've also seen small children chasing frightened dogs unfamiliar with the play of young children or petting animals that they cannot be sure are entirely friendly. I've also seen (small) dogs nip at children in the parks and generally distract parents from controlling their own dogs. My dog was attacked several years ago by another dog that was trying to protect his small family member, to whom my dog apparently roamed too close. That attack caused a trip to the emergency vet and 40 stitches.

Please keep small people out of dog parks, regardless of the size of the canines allowed inside. While it would be wonderful to assume that all dogs in parks are in accordance with the ordinances posted, the mastiff was simply one instance of a dog owner who may not have fully recognized the ways in which any given dog will respond to different stimuli.

SOARING PROFITS

As the health care debate enters our lives daily one thing is clear beyond question. Reform of the insurance industry is a must. The cost to small business is stifling. The cost to large employers is huge and bringing down wages as a result. The cost to the unemployed is unattainable, and the cost to our economy cannot be sustained. Yet the insurance industry threatens to raise premiums while their profits soar and they enjoy exemption from anti-trust laws.

Among the remedies is the possibility of a public option. This option to private insurance is the lightning rod that has brought the scare tactics floating to the top of the boiling cauldron of fears, lies and propaganda that the insurance industry, their minions and the uninformed have concocted.

Socialism, they cry, while some of them are collecting Social Security and Medicare. Government takeover, they bellow, but if it comes to fruition it would be nothing but an option to some. The term "death panels" was thrown into the fray by the ex-governer of Alaska, which refers to end of life counseling of which she was a proponent before she quit her job. It has even been called a Ponzi scheme to which I wonder, who are the undeserving schemers other than those without an option?

Please people, get informed! If this is important to you, do some research into the reason we are in this situation and how much money the insurance industry is spending to defeat the reform and keep us in their greedy grip.

One axiom that always pans out is "follow the money."

HYPED RELEASE OF SHOPLIFTER

This summer jail boosters successfully hyped the early release of an inmate later convicted of rape as a political bludgeon to increase jail deputy funding.

But what was the dangerous crime the inmate, Paul Dawson, was convicted of before he was released due to jail overcrowding? Court records show it involved shoplifting and scuffling with security guards.

Last August, Dawson stole a pair of shoes and a lanyard from the UO Duck Store, according to court records. When confronted, he apparently pushed a guard. For the shoplifting and scuffle, he was convicted of Robbery 3 (the least serious robbery), Theft 2 (of property greater than $50 in value) and Assault 4, the least serious violent crime involving a non-serious intentional, reckless or negligent injury to another. Assault 4 is a misdemeanor.

It's unclear if Dawson would have been released after the shoplifting and misdemeanor incident even if the 84 jail beds hadn't been cut due to a reduction in federal funding. The county has given early release to thousands of inmates involved in minor crimes over the past decades due to cuts in federal funding and local voters repeatedly rejecting tax increases for the jail.

But Lane Circuit Court Judge Gregory Foote claimed the release of the shoplifter and the subsequent rape was "as a result of a political decision" by progressive county Commissioners calling it the "irresponsible actions of a group of politicians." Conservatives, including The Register-Guard and laid-off jail deputies and their friends, echoed the political attack.

But it didn't appear that Foote's colleagues thought Dawson was especially dangerous before the rape. Dawson was released after his arrest with a promise to return for his trial, which he did. In sentencing Dawson to one year, Lane Circuit Court Judge Maurice Merten ordered, "the defendant is eligible for all alternatives" and "may be considered" for "any form of temporary leave from custody, reduction in sentence, work release alternative incarceration." The court "is not opposed to alternative sentencing sanctions at the discretion of the supervisory authority.

The case file indicated that Dawson, 23, had a criminal history of earlier convictions for misdemeanor Assault 4, theft and criminal mischief, some as a juvenile.

Dawson spent only a day in jail before sheriff staff decided he was the safest person to release due to federal limits on the number of inmates the facility can hold.

Ironically, if Dawson had been convicted of less serious misdemeanors, he may have spent more time in jail. The city of Eugene pays the county to reserve about 20 beds at the jail for people convicted of minor crimes by the city's municipal court. Neither the city nor the county will allow more dangerous offenders from Eugene to fill those beds reserved for minor offenses. — Alan Pittman

ELF GOES MAINSTREAM?

The former spokesman for the nebulous Earth Liberation Front, Craig Rosebraugh, is celebrating the national launch of Resistance: the Journal of the Earth Liberation Movement, an ecofriendly new magazine. The most recent issue features stories such as "Ecoterrorist of the Season: Shell" and a story called "Solidarity Actions ... thanks but no thanks" discussing the Romania arson that was set in response to the Jeff "Free" Luers trial for his own Romania fire.

The magazine will be available locally at Borders and other major bookstore chains as well as at smaller independent bookstores and infoshops, Rosebraugh says. The choice to go with larger, corporate distribution stems from the goal to create "an effective, diverse and large movement to protect the planet," he says.

The magazine is a "response to an urgent climate crisis that needs immediate and effective action," he says. It shares its name with a newsprint publication from about nine years ago that Rosebraugh worked on here in Oregon that documented ELF activity during that time.

Rosebraugh says, "Resistance was created to inform readers not only of the dangerous state of the planet, but also the urgency of action." The magazine, he says, features discussions on the strategy, theory, news and frontline actions of a new emerging environmental movement, which "realizes that when governments and politicians refuse to act to protect the planet, it is up to all of us to step in and protect our home." The goal, he says, is to "remove the profit motive that is driving environmental destruction."

With the recent upholding by a federal appeals court of the convictions of six Stop Huntingdon Cruelty activists as terrorists under the Animal Enterprise Terrorism act, despite arguments that their website's activities were protected by the First Amendment, it is unclear whether the new magazine will encounter free speech and press issues of its own. Rosebraugh says, "If this were a just country and government, no, we would not. But when has this government ever been truly just?

STOVETEAM EXPANDS FACTORIES

Remember field burning? Imagine smoke like that in your house, every day, whenever you wanted to cook food or make tea.

Indoor air pollution kills 1.6 million people a year, according to the World Health Organization. In developing countries, indoor smoke can be a bigger killer, especially of children, than malaria. One thing that can help? More efficient stoves.

When the Weekly wrote about Eugene's StoveTeam International in July 2008, founder Nancy Hughes and board member Gerry Reicher were excited about expanding production of their Ecocina stoves into more countries. Hughes says that measurements have shown the Ecocina reduces particulates by 70 percent and wood consumption by at least 50 percent.

StoveTeam began serious work in El Salvador, where factory owner Gustavo Peña was enthusiastically attempting to expand production last year. "We thought the factory would produce and sell maybe 150 stoves in the first year," Hughes said in an interview. Instead, the factory made 6,000 stoves.

Now, there's a factory in Guatemala (owned and operated by Guatemalans), and StoveTeam International is working with a technical school in Honduras. Volunteers and board members just returned from a trip to El Salvador, Guatemala and Nicaragua, where they're collaborating with a group to set up a factory in Leon.

StoveTeam International scatters the seeds but doesn't collect the fruit. "We provide information, help find the money, provide the stove design and molds," Reicher said. Then the factory is on its own, and only if the owner wants to call the stoves "Ecocinas" does StoveTeam hold the group responsible for sticking with the design.

With the economic downturn in the U.S., funds, which have mostly come from Rotary groups and Rotary International, have dried up a bit. Local groups still provide money for factory start-ups, Hughes and Reicher said, but the international group no longer matches the donations. So they're working harder on fundraising from individuals.

In El Salvador on their most recent trip, the vice minister for the environment spoke enthusiastically about the stoves, Reicher said. Hughes said that the last vice minister, a man, was dismissive — "He thought the Ecocina looked like a toilet!" The new vice minister. Reicher said, saw it differ-

"The Ecocina is so much hotter and does all of the things faster than before and with much less money for wood," he said. The women and men who buy the stove see that "they can breathe, and their kids don't get burned." The vice minister will visit the Salvadoran factory in early November, and Hughes and Reicher have hopes for government-supported expansion.

CLASSROOM BUCKS GO TO DUCK ATHLETICS

The UO has long claimed that its lavish athletics department is financially self-sufficient

Turns out that's not really true. The UO Athletics Department is receiving a $1.54 million dollar subsidy in 2008-09 from state coffers, according to the Oregon State System of Higher Education (OSSHE) budget. That's a 32 percent increase in the athletic subsidy from the year before.

Meanwhile, the state has slashed services in a budget crisis, jacked up college tuition, shut offices and packed classrooms with the second highest pupil-to-teacher ratio in the nation. The UO spends its athletics money on a $7 million contract for its football coach, the most expensive basketball arena ever built and a paneled football locker room with a waterfall, video game consoles and other amenities that rival extravagant spas.

The athletic subsidy comes out of lottery money that the state could otherwise use to backfill its budget and avoid cuts to schools and other services. The Legislature voted in 2005 to dedicate a bigger cut of lottery proceeds to intercollegiate athletics in the state. The UO gets the biggest cut of the subsidy pot, which totaled $6.4 million in 2008-09.

The 2005 bill almost tripled the subsidy

CLIMATE POLITICS

Dale Jamieson was recently part of a panel at the UO discussing the question, "What do we do if politics fail us?" He turned that question around.

"I think we can fail politics," he said.
"If I have a single reaction to being in Oregon, it's how much anti-government feeling there is."

Jamieson is in residence at the UO this fall as the 2009-2010 Wayne Morse Chair at the University of Oregon. He will give a public address titled "The Moral and Political Challenges of Climate Change" at 7 pm Tuesday, Nov. 3, at 110 Knight Law Center, 15th and Agate.

Jamieson is director of the environmental studies program, professor of environmental studies and philosophy and an affiliated professor of law at NYU. An internationally acclaimed scholar on climate change, he doesn't flinch from what he sees to be the hard truth about the world we live in

In order to effect change, people need to be actively involved in politics, getting down to the "grubby work" of environmental and social activism, Jamieson said.

"People typically think of climate change as a scientific, social issue, but it's a moral and political issue," he said in an interview with EW.

His various essays, papers and talks are a plea for activism that interacts as much as it acts.

• The hypocrisy and lack of openness and integrity of the Eugene City Council majority in ousting a municipal judge serving as chairman of the Civilian Review Board is stunning. Citizens should long remember the votes of Andrea Ortiz, Alan Zelenka, Mike Clark, Jennifer Solomon, Chris Pryor and George Poling to oust Richard Brissenden for doing his job well in independently reviewing police conduct. Not one logical argument was presented for this decision. Credible independent oversight of police review in Eugene now appears dead. Resurrecting oversight could take citizen action in recalling officials who oppose police review or defeating them at reelection, citizen ballot initiatives, intense public pressure on city government, and lawsuits. We also join conservatives on The Register-Guard editorial board in calling for an immediate moratorium on the use of Tasers by Eugene police until the department ends its secrecy and develops a meaningful policy that actually restricts this dangerous, excruciating weapon.

Indiscriminate Taser use is a human rights issue, a public relations catastrophe for EPD, and a serious financial liability for the city. So far, no one in Eugene has died as the result of being Tasered, but Google "Taser lawsuits" to see the hugely expensive personal injury litigation other cities are facing.

- Speaking of Tasers, Bonny Bettman's "Tase Me," sung to the tune of Patsy Cline's "Crazy," was one of the highlights of the Oct. 24 Best of Eugene Awards Show, and the former city councilor dressed in a hazmat suit even got heckled. Was that police union president Willy Edewaard uncomfortable and grumbling in the front row? We heard he was there to see his musician kid perform. What he also endured was Bettman singing, Tase me/ As long and as much as you want to/ Tase me/ Then make up a ludicrous excuse/ You know/ The chief will always support you/ and then/ the mayor and council will approve ... So Tase me/ for jay-walking/ and Tase me/ for talking/ and Tase me/ for not being like you.
- Our Best of Eugene Awards Show filled nearly every seat at the McDonald Theatre Saturday. Thanks to everyone who turned out to celebrate the winners tabulated from a record number of paper and online ballots. It was Eugene's Oscars night, only with fetish chains and spanking, silly dancing and prancing, wild costumes, plenty of politics, bad jokes and miscues, and a lot of fresh new music from the top contenders in our Next Big Thing music contest. Congrats to the winning band John Giovanni. In all, it was a memorable night, the kind of funky, homegrown production that our late, great art director, Kevin Dougherty, would have loved.

We showed photos and talked about Kevin at the beginning of Saturday night's event and his good friend Norma Sax described his deep involvement with the Oregon Country Fair. See our story on him this week on page 11. We hope everyone who knew Kevin or appreciated his work will join us, his family and the Country Fair Family at a free community celebration of his life beginning at 7 pm this Thursday, Oct. 29, at the WOW Hall (see our Calendar for more info).

- It's only a matter of time. Some unfortunate soul will suffer a wrenching death due to the irresponsible actions of a group of politicians. That's right, as a result of a political decision to fund the jail instead of the county Extension Service, a botulinum in a miscanned tomato will kill. If only those judges, jail deputies and conservative special interests hadn't successfully lobbied to divert extension funding to the jail, a life could have been saved. As a their penalty, they should have to eat it.
- Hooray for the city of Eugene for getting the gold in cycling! The promotion of the city from silver to gold in cycling friendliness from the League of American Bicyclists is great news. Cycling offers big hope in reducing the city's carbon footprint and increasing local livability. It's also a lot of fun and creates sustainable jobs in bike building, bike shops and tourism. We're on the right track. Now it's time for the city to catch up to Portland and set its sights on the platinum award. Pumping a new bike master plan up with real commitments to funding and building miles and miles of new bike lanes and separated bikeways should put us over the top.

DIVINIA JELEN

"Garage sales are my summer job," says Divinia Jelen of Cottage Grove, who bought nail polish for four years before transforming the faded hood of her 1988 Escort into a nail-polish mural depicting western Oregon. "The central figure is Mother Earth with a water goddess superimposed. Her legs become rivers full of fish." Jelen worked four hours a day from early September until mid-October on the painting. "It's my first work of art," she admits. "My artist friend Bedo drew the basic design on the hood." An avid garage-sale art collector, Jelen covers her walls with paintings. "I take pride in rescuing them," she says. "I use feng shui to arrange them." Self-reliant since a neglected childhood in the north woods of Wisconsin, Jelen split for California at 13, worked as a book-keeper and a CPA. She became a social activist and manager of the radical newspaper The Seed in Chicago ("the CIA confiscated our last paper") and manager of a food-co-op directory in Albuquerque ("a knock at the door: 'We want you to leave town'"). Since coming to Eugene in 1980, she has been a founding member of the East Blair Co-op, got a bachelor's degree in geography, worked in merchandising, then retired to Cottage Grove to favor her asthma.

away with a sober sense of the importance of this issue," he said. "It is a much more complex issue than they might think. It's not just kicking the bums out or being more 'green.'... Basically, if we stop emitting now, it will take 1,000 years to get back to a pre-industrial environment. In essence, we're looking to prevent problems we haven't yet caused."

His speech will be equal parts science and a rallying of the troops. It's not about stopping climate change, he says, but rather learning how to live with the modern industrial world we've created and to "manage it intelligently." One demonstration or extra bicycle isn't going to change anything, he said.

"More rests on people's shoulders than they'd like to think," he said.

And I thought of you.

You were trying to break into another world

A world I never knew.

I always kind of wondered

If you ever made it through.

Seen a shooting star tonight

Seen a shooting star tonight

— Bob Dylan, 'Shooting Star'

And I thought of you.

e was an artist, a friend, a lover of music, a father and a cherished part of Eugene. Longtime EW Art Director and Production Manager Kevin Dougherty died at home on Oct. 21 of an apparent heart attack. A community celebration of his life is planned from 7 pm to midnight Thursday, Oct. 29, at the WOW Hall.

Dougherty leaves behind three children, Jack, 13, Sarah, 19, and Daniel, 21, and their mothers, Jayne Mondello and Aria Seligmann. He leaves three sisters, Christine McMahon, Maureen Cullen and Diane Dougherty and his mother, Francis Dougherty, 82. And he leaves hundreds of friends in the Eugene community from everyone at the EW to the Oregon Country Fair and beyond.

Dougherty died during a hail of shooting stars, the Orionid meteor shower. He used to tell his friends he wanted Bob Dylan's song, "Shooting Star," played at his funeral, and the song was played along with a slide show of photos at the beginning of the Best of Eugene Awards Show at the McDonald Theatre Oct. 24, where the audience gave a standing ovation to his memory.

Dougherty grew up in New York, where he played in Central Park, went to Coney Island and rode the Staten Island Ferry with his sisters, releasing birthday wishes in balloons as the ferry passed the Statue of Liberty. After a brief stint on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, he used the money he had made to follow the Grateful Dead to the West Coast and eventually to Eugene. To help support his travels he tie-dyed T-shirts in hotel bathtubs to sell along the way. At one point, he worked for a pet detective called Sherlock Bones.

He already had a degree in business, but following his love for art, he went back to school for graphic design at LCC. Tim Blood. his adviser at LCC, wrote the Weekly an email saying Dougherty's that sudden death a huge loss to this community." Norma Sax, who worked with Dougherty at the OCF writes, "His willingness to share his enormous artistic talent and creativity was a treasured gift for us." She adds, "We know right now he's dancing at the biggest Fair of all and smiling that Kevin smile.'

These are only two of dozens of messages the Weekly received mourning Dougherty's death.

Dougherty began working at the Eugene Weekly in 1994. In 1998 he became production manager, and in 1999 also took over the job of art director. He served on the executive committee that ran the newspaper as well.

Dougherty was an accomplished artist in several media and had a long involvement with art in Eugene. He helped found the Last Friday ArtWalk, and hosted early performances of the Lord Leebrick Theatre in his living room.

"We remember him for his laughter, his hugs, his patience with the millions of corrections the editorial staff made to their stories, long after they were supposed to be done, and his staunch support of his art and production staff," says reporter

Camilla Mortensen.
"He would also drop chocolate on the desks of tired writers, and make lunch for sales people that he thought needed a little better nutrition."

"He cared a lot about people," says Bill Shreve, the Weekly's director of sales and marketing.

"What you see in your hands when you pick up a copy of Eugene Weekly—the award-winning cover designs, the layout, the use of headlines and images, many of the advertising designs—it's all the work of Kevin and his crew," says Editor Ted Taylor. "The Art Department is where it all comes together every week, and Kevin's creativity has been a driving force for the past 15 years. Kevin was a great storyteller and I think that's one of the reasons he loved the newspaper so much. Stories and photos have a profound power to change the way people think about our world, and he helped make our stories vibrant and readable."

Todd Cooper worked closely with Dougherty in production and remembers him for "his sense of humor and patience on stressful weeks, for his willingness to always drop whatever he was doing to help you out," and for teaching him that "it's important to get it all done, but family always comes first."

Dougherty recently returned from a trip to New York to see his mother and was elated to have reconnected with his first girlfriend, Holly Nicolois.

Family and friends tell of his love for and commitment to his three children. His daughter, Sarah Dougherty remembers long car trips with her father, including a vacation this past summer to visit family in California. "We would complain about going back home because we were having so much fun," she says. "He could drive for hours and hours. I don't know how he could do it but he really did enjoy being in the car with me and Jack."

Many people in Eugene remember Dougherty as the owner of the classic redand-black Eugene Weekly VW van, which he bought from the paper and kept running for as long as possible. It was parked outside his house. Former reporter Kera Abrams says alongside the ever-changing art he created and displayed, "even the vintage EW van seemed like an art installation."

Sarah Decker worked closely with Dougherty in production, and says, "Kevin was an amazing boss and coworker, a wonderful friend and an inspirational human being. He knew how to make us laugh, and he sure knows how to make us weep. I will miss him every day of my life."

Photos and memories of Dougherty can be found at www.eugeneweekly.com and a memorial table has been set up in the lobby at EW. Remembrances can be read and posted at blogs.eugeneweekly.com

FRESHLY SQUEEZED

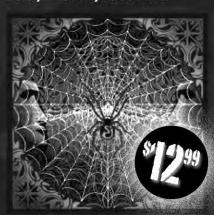

New music from the place to find it.

DEAD BY SUNRISE (LINKIN PARK) - OUT OF ASHES: You know the voice. With Linkin Park, that voice has shared stages with Paul McCartney, Jay-Z, Alice In Chains, the Doors, Perry Farrell. Yeah, you know the voice of Chester Bennington. And now, stepping outside of Linkin Park on Out Of Ashes, the first album from his new project. Dead By Sunrise.

KINGS OF CONVENIENCE - DECLARATION OF DEPENDENCE: This is the story of two people living two very different lives sensing that they are immensely more powerful together than apart. In that sense it is the most adult, the most mature record Kings of Convenience have ever made. He's very free and creative and his access to unusual and fresh ideas is very good I find that quite unique. For some reason they are very similar to my ideas on music

TRING CHEESE INCIDENT - TRICK OR TREAT:
BEST OF STRING CHEESE INCIDENT: October 27, release is fitting, considering 2-CD set was culled from a variety of epic 'Hulaween' shows.
From Philadelphia's Electric Factory (1999),
Portland, Maine's State Theatre (2000), NYC's
Theatre at Madison Square Garden (2001), Sin
City's Cox Pavillion (2003)- this CD journeys through the years to re-visit some of the band's most classic Incidents from Halloweens past.

FLAMING LIPS - EMBRYONIC: The Flaming Lips have returned to what garnered them fame in the first place. Always respected - The Flaming Lips have dedicated themselves to exploring sound at the detriment of everything else, even it means making a song that is downright difficult to listen to. It's not about doing what's safe for The Lips. it's about shaking things up.

PELICAN - WHAT WE ALL COME TO NEED: This is the album that straddles the fine line between adherence to roots and the mining of the unexplored. Recorded with Chris Common, who has helmed records for a variety of bands, from Minus The Bear to These Arms Are Snakes, 'What We All Come To Need' is as punishing as it is calming. This is Pelican at their most inspired and sonically adept, delivering 50 minutes of weighty riffs and textured progressions.

WHITE RABBITS - IT'S FRIGHTENING: Stylish sound, good lyrics, awesome songs. You may feel the influence of Spoon, Franz Ferdinand, Radiohead ... and still it sounds pretty original. And the band's name doesen't really matter to me now ... In a time where 'alt indie' is so shifted towards soft folk ballads and lack of originality, White Rabbits have made it with an outstanding album, Great iob!

ALMOST - MONSTER MONSTER: 2009 release from this Alt-Rock band formed by Underoath member Aaron Gillespie. The Almost's Monster Monster represents the culmination of two years of touring, with the resulting disc a melding of the group's individual talents into a truly collaborative effort. The band is raring to go out and play the new songs for their loyal fan base.

GOV'T MULE - BY A THREAD: Gov't Mule is a wildly creative and fearsomely talented rock band lauded by Rolling Stone for successfully bringing the classic power-trio sound of Cream and the Jimi Hendrix Experience into the 21st Century has completed work on By A Thread - their first studio album in 3 years.

CARLY SIMON - NEVER BEEN GONE: The new album revisits songs originally written throughout Carly's extensively long and productive career. With new largely acoustic arrangements, the CD was recorded at home on the island of Martha's Vineyard. Carly's son Benjamin Taylor was the originator of the idea and Carly willingly (though sometimes hesitantly) complied and lived up to the dare.

MICHAEL BUBLE - CRAZY LOVE: Buble's first CD in two and a half years, features two original songs along with his always original take on 11 standards. The Grammy winning artist hunkered down in recording studios in LA, Brooklyn, New York and his hometown of Vancouver to make his 'ultimate record about the inevitable roller coaster ride of relationships.

JACK JOHNSON - EN CONCERT: The 2008 world tour had a ton of special moments, and this CD represents some of the finest. From sharing the stage at Bonnaroo with Eddie Vedder, to leading a massive singalong at Bercy in Paris, to wowing a festival crowd at Outside Lands, to stepping onto the stage alone to close the show SQUIRREL NUT ZIPPERS LOST AT SEA: After a nine year break from releasing albums, the Squirrel Nut Zippers return in 2009 with their first ever live release titled Lost At Sea. For a band that carved out their reputation as the 'hottest band in the hall', it seems fitting that the re-launch of the group, who have sold over three million albums to date, will be centered on their strongest suit.

Secret Survey

City manager hires political poll on council

ugene City Manager Jon Ruiz conducted a secret $25,000 political poll with questions about the performance of elected officials without the City Council knowing about it.

The poll asked whether respondents agreed with the statement that "Eugene's elected officials are totally trustworthy." The survey found 29 percent agreed and 34 percent did not, with the rest undecided.

Another survey question asked whether respondents agreed that "The Eugene City Council does an excellent job of determining priorities and overseeing public policy in the City." Only 17 percent agreed, 47 percent disagreed and the rest were undecided.

Several councilors told the manager at a Sept. 23 "process session" that in their supposed role of overseeing public policy, they should have been told about Ruiz's poll before it was conducted. "I just feel like we should have been consulted," said Councilor George Brown.

A THIRD (31 PERCENT)
SUPPORTED
EXPANDING
THE CITY'S
BOUNDARY.

But Ruiz said he didn't want elected officials to oversee his political polling. "I have some concern about council weighing in about wordsmithing under the guise of policy, because all of a sudden that becomes also political, because now the questions become much more about what your particular position or interest is."

But while Ruiz didn't want democratically elected officials' positions or interests in the poll, his poll is clearly political.

The poll appeared designed to push for support for passage of a new urban renewal measure, despite a 2-1 defeat of urban renewal at the polls two years ago. Citizens opposed the $40 million measure as a diversion of tax money from schools and other important government services to unfairly subsidize chain-store developers to compete with local businesses. But city staff have long depended on urban renewal to fund their own salaries.

In theory, using taxpayer money for political campaigns is illegal in Oregon. The survey questions tested possible arguments to use in a campaign for an urban renewal measure. But the law is rarely enforced, especially before a measure is actually put on the ballot.

Ruiz, who moved to Eugene from Fresno, chose Gary Manross, a Los Angeles operative on political and corporate campaigns, to conduct the survey. Manross advised in a council meeting Sept. 14 that the city use the survey results to help push Ruiz's urban renewal plans. "This way you can say this is what the electorate wants," Manross said.

The survey included long question introductions that spun urban renewal as a "job creation" program in the down economy. But with downtown full of vacancies and pits after 40 years of city "urban renewal," it's hard to say that the city's approach has created any jobs.

Even with the slanted poll questions pushing for urban renewal, only 48 percent of respondents said they would definitely or probably support a $20 million urban renewal measure.

It's hard to say if the poll respondents would reflect voters. Sixty percent of respondents were over 55 years old, about double the U.S. Census numbers for Eugene. The pollster said the poll was of likely voters.

Here are other interesting numbers from the poll:

- Less than a third (31 percent) supported expanding the city's Urban Growth Boundary. Forty-three percent opposed expanding the UGB, and 25 percent were unsure.
- Eighty-one percent agreed with the statement: "Eugene is a great community; I'm happy to be a resident."
- Only 3 percent of respondents said they were "especially concerned" about crime and public safety.
- Three quarters of respondents described the economy as worse than a mild recession. But more than half (57 percent) felt that in a year the economy would be out of the recession.
- Twice as many respondents described themselves as liberal (41 percent) as conservative (19 percent). The rest (32 percent) said they were moderate or declined to answer (8 percent).
- Eugene may have a Republican city manager doing its political poling with taxpayer money, but Democrats outnumbered Republicans almost three to one in the poll (65 vs. 23 percent).

The city manager's political survey may be more interesting for the questions that it didn't ask on pressing issues. The survey did not ask about the city's controversial decision to move its police station out of downtown to north Eugene, contradicting the city's supposed efforts to increase employment and safety downtown

The 64-question survey also did not ask about livability, reducing global warming pollution, tax breaks for developers and corporations, police accountability, building more freeways, control of government by an unelected city manager and whether or not the unelected city executives that actually run the city are "totally trustworthy" and do an "excellent job."

Hunting Ghosts at the Bijou

ext time you're at the Bijou watching a scary movie, you might want to think twice about keeping your eyes glued to the screen. Word has it the theater is haunted by the apparition of a woman.

Come Saturday, Halloween morning, Lois Earl of the Oregon Ghost Hunters might capture scientific evidence that ghosts are kicking around the place. Earl said Monday she's been pestering the owners of the Bijou Art Cinema for years, asking that she and her team of paranormal investigators be allowed to haul their Sony Cyber-shots, digital thermometers and electro-magnetic field detectors into the former mortuary — yes, mortuary — in order to flush out the female apparition rumored to be haunting the place. Or perhaps the spirit is Boo, the beloved Bijou cat who passed away this year.

"I've kind of been after them for a while," Earl said Monday of her efforts to ghost-hunt the theater. "I've heard stories of them being haunted. I've just read a lot of things from people that worked in there. Projectors will act up, people will get creepy feelings in there, people seeing shadows out of the corner of their eyes."

Earl, who founded OGH with her husband and daughter in 2007 to satisfy her lifelong curiosity about paranormal phenomenon ("We've lived in different places where weird things happened," she explained), said that her inquiries into all things spooky have had the effect of making her more credulous about life beyond this mortal coil. "When I first got into it I went in with a lot of questions," she said. "Now I'm more of a believer. A lot of times we're left scratching our heads."

Bijou manager Louise Thompson said the theater has brought in a handful of different paranormal investigators over the years. "I thought it was amusing," Thomson admitted of past ghost-busting activities, "but by the end of it I was totally exhausted. Their cameras would lose their battery charge and I'd go, 'Oh, crap, really? So they are here."

Thompson said that, though she herself doesn't feel a presence in the theater, she is now a lot less skeptical about the possibility something is out there. And, personally, Thompson said she's curious if Earl and crew get any indication that the Bijou's late owner, Michael Lamont, who died in 2007, is perhaps hanging around his beloved establishment.

In order to keep things on the level and to avoid accusations of profiteering or publicity stunting — Earl said she refuses to charge for OGH's services. "We do it out of our own pocket," she said. The idea, as the group's website (www.oregonghosthunters. com) claims, is to "set the standard for other paranormal teams." Everything is based on a scientific model, she added, meaning that logical explanations are sought for any strange occurrences; when that fails, OGH gathers and documents evidence in as complete a fashion as possible. They are not, however, exorcists; in other words, they can verify whether a paranormal presence exists, but they can't tell you what the hell to do about it. That's up to someone else.

Having investigated several businesses and residences in the past couple of years, including the Heceta Head Lighthouse, Earl said she's experienced everything from voices and sounds to a phantom tug on her clothing. (A couple of her clients were so freaked out they opted not to move into the house they asked OGH to investigate.) And yet, Earl said she never really gets frightened herself. "You think you're going to get scared, but once you're there your adrenaline gets going. You just want to capture more."

Earl said that for OGH's Oct. 31 investigation of the Bijou, it will be business as usual: "We'll probably do the same basic groundwork," she said, which includes getting base readings of temperature, sound and the theater's existing electro-magnetic field. "That way if we get a spike, we know it's out of the norm," Earl explained.

Brent Prasnikar and his bulldog Helmsley are the duo that bring you the weather in style, with Helmsley sporting appropriate fashion choices for upcoming outdoor conditions. Prasnikar is also a practitioner of Jeet Kune Do and Jiu Jitsu and has participated in more extreme sports than can be counted on one hand, including ice climbing and glacial lake swimming.

person of the year (and why)

- 1. Kitty Piercy
- 2. Peter DeFazio
- 3. Barack Obama

Our mayor was the overwhelming favorite in this category once again this year, getting praise from our readers for trouncing Jim Torrey in the mayoral race, being "the most LGBTQ-friendly mayor we've ever had," being both "nice" and "tough" and showing up for everything, everywhere (defying the known laws of physics). She also garnered kudos and votes for rapping at the Whiteaker Block Party. The list of people mentioned in this category makes up a remarkable who's who of Eugene, from the late Leslie Brockelbank to Lauren Regan to LeGarrette Blount, "who showed us why we need a boxing team." Obama's not exactly local, but it looks like we've adopted him as one of our own.

This year the uproar continued when the supposedly independent Civilian Review Board, stacked with people opposed to police oversight, agreed with the cops that officers did nothing wrong — video evidence and overwhelming citizen testimony be damned.

Float through the mossy maples amid the blue wizard hats of larkspur on a winding bike trail; watch a pair of geese fly through an outdoor concert before the moon rises over the amphitheatre: drift up to where a beaver chiseled down a tree on the canoe canal: thump along in the steps of a track legend on a trail through woods and meadows: watch an osprev plunge and rip a fish out of a rapid and a heron patiently wait for its chance. No wonder Eugene loves its largest park.

best local politician

- 1. Peter DeFazio
- 2. Kitty Piercy
- 3. Chris Edwards

Pete DeFazio rose to the top this year as our scrappy Fourth District representative in Congress, always asking the tough questions and standing up for transparency, fairness and accountability in our federal government. DaFaz courageously and skillfully held his ground during the congressional summer break, confronted time after time by right-wing radicals in town hall meetings. Chris Edwards is new to the top three list this year. State Rep. Edwards was appointed to the state Senate and is a rising star in state politics.

worst thing about eugene weekly

- 1. Liberal bias
- 2. ¡Ask a Mexican!
- 3. The general smuttiness of the last few pages (Dan Savage, American Apparel and other ads were all listed)

All these terrible things about EW were also popular responses to the "Best Thing about EW." so it appears our readers are hopelessly divided, or maybe just confused. Kind of like Eugene. It seems our paper has something for everyone to love or hate or both, even on the same page. One complaint was "skanky ads in back when you're trying to read an innocent horoscope." Yeah, we know. It's hard to concentrate on Brezsny's refined wisdom with a "Spanking Buddies Wanted" ad nearby. The astrologer would probably advise you to practice holding two conflicting ideas in your mind at the same time.

In Eugene, green isn't just a color; it's a way of life. The competition for Best Green Cause was fierce. Our winning cause, ending pesticide spraying as espoused by the Pitchfork Rebellion, made headlines this year in the aftermath of the anti-pesticide rally that ended in the Tasing of Ian Van Ornum and the arrest of Pitchfork rebel Day Owen. Growing your own (local food, that is) as well as buying it locally came in second, with some props going to Adam's Sustainable third were the efforts by Cascadia Wildlands to establish Devil's Staircase as a Wilderness, and the campaign to end field burning, which was championed by the Western Environmental Law Center, Oregon Toxics Alliance and local citizens and politicians.

Recent posts include "Having My Way With Winter Squash," which is enough to make us hungry even when we've just eaten, and an appreciation of the traditional Jewish deli. Third-place finisher Urinal Gum is kind of awesome: It's a blog, but it's also a zine, and many of the blog posts appear to be scanned zine pages. On these pages, the Urinal Gum folks muse about roller derby, doing karaoke at dive bars, various top five lists and assorted miscellany. "The stated purpose of the zine is to enhance others' lives through drivel," the Urinal Gum LiveJournal profile says. We say that's a worthy goal.

best writer

- 2. Sally Sheklow, Eugene Weekly
- 3. Camilla Mortensen, Eugene Weekly

It's a bit weird that the daily's notat-all-edgy columnist/feature writer Bob Welch would win Best Writer in an edgy alternative newspaper, especially since Welch replaced the hard-hitting Don Bishoff. And he's done it for years in a row, so it's not just a fluke. In the autumn Oregon Quarterly magazine, former journalism professor Dean Rea calls Welch "The Vacuum Cleaner" for his information gathering skills. EW writers Sally Sheklow and Camilla Mortensen are close behind with our readers. Camilla is

We want to see some crosspollination here, with the boldest theater company in town using the many-voiced chorus as back-up singers in the next Mamet play. That big space the Leebrick bought downtown certainly could lend itself to hosting one of the largest singing groups Eugene's ever seen: Soromundi's going strong in its 11th year, with loyal members and fans packing concerts and selling out the Hult Center. Surely the hardworking artistic directors of each company could figure something out? And in the other tie, ACE, with its joyful mix of musical madness and maniacally moving food servers, could provide some interpretive dance — or small holiday angels in jack-

Crass behavior and a dubious title help make the Donkey Show Eugene's favorite again this year. With everything from interviews with Wayne Static of Static-X to shows coming straight to listeners from Vegas, the Donk's appeal is undeniable. Ironically, we can't recall a time a literal donkey show has occurred on The Donkey Show. We are now collectively shuddering in horror at the thought.

And Playground Sports has it in a moderately sized landslide! We're not sure how the adult sports league stayed under our radar for so long — and hev, get your head out of the gutter. We don't mean that kind of adult sports. We mean sports both traditional (basketball, volleyball) and, well, slightly childish — in the best possible way. If you want to play dodgeball or kickball, Playground Sports is the place to do it. The league's mission is twofold, according to the charmingly designed website: "To provide the Willamette Valley with quality recreational sports activities for adults at all skill levels" and "To have a ball." We're eyeing the dodgeball league. We always liked dodgeball. Even if those little balls look like they could leave some serious bruises.

Volifonix, a self-described "fried-funk rock band," was Eugene's favorite rock band last year, with Reeble Jar a close second. That Reeble Jar spin-off band Ruins of Ooah came in second place this year is further proof that Eugene rocks and rolls to the rhythms of the world. But it was almost an upset. Medium Troy's album Bohemian Dub, though a fine slab o' hip hop, came out two years ago, which technically means it's not qualified for this year's award. Peeps liked Bohemian Dub so much, though, that it's on the list in a respectable third. Volifonix describes their music best: "pure muso-theoretical kung fu served up with a muscley groove ... an original hair-on-fire approach to the hot/rock/funk genre."

After just one year, the David Minor Theater has established itself as a cultural landmark, though founder/co-owner Josh Goldfarb insists the place is very much a work in progress. The idea, he says. seemed simple: one big movie house that served booze, "I had always wanted to go to such a theater here in Eugene," Goldfarb explains, "ever since I was old enough, or not old enough, to be sneaking beer into movies." Little did he know. In the months following the grand opening, Goldfarb expanded the David Minor into two distinct theaters — a more mainstream theater seating 50 people, along with a smaller "living room" that holds just over a dozen — along with adding food from Cornucopia and Café Lucky Noodle to the menu. The "comfy" seats, however, have proven more important to moviegoers than any other offering. "I had no idea going into it," Goldfarb says. But what gives the David Minor staying power, he adds, is the distinctly non-movieplex appeal of getting a combined dinner and film for somewhere around 30 bucks — just the right price, he says, "for people who are trying to impress the lady on a budget."

How can you not love olivejuice? The employees/owners wore gas masks during the store's construction really. Visit the MySpace page. There are pictures. It's a store you won't be embarrassed to be caught in. The folks are charming, and feather boas abound. They stock costumes, lingerie, local music and more. Unlike some so-termed "naughty" businesses (purveyors of naughtydom?), this Whiteaker-owned and operated business won't leave you feeling diseased. We at the EW love Claire Flint for things like last year's squee-worthy Winter Reading issue cover, not to mention her fascinating encaustic/photography mashups and various other series. Is it always a bridesmaid, never a bride for Lady Lumps and One-Eyed Jack? Both of those derby ladies made into our top three last year too but still haven't taken our first place prize. This year's winner is Agent Orange (which is much easier for us to spell than her "real" name, Kylie Belachaikovsky). Go to a derby bout, and you can't miss Agent Orange of the Andromedolls: She's the tall, red-haired tattooed one, smashing her way through her fellow skaters and smiling while she does it.

It also means hand selecting green beans grown in a sustainable manner, roasting small batches with exclusively wind-powered equipment and painstakingly combining individual beans to find delicious combinations like Chupacabra, the Goat's signature espresso blend. All of the above — along with a classic bohemian atmosphere of Northwesty-cum-European café and a lonely hearts club clientele that runs the gamut from old-timers and artsy types to students and bookworms, with a little scruffy elitist attitude thrown in - make Wandering Goat Coffee Company Eugene's premiere stop for a bracing vet relaxing pickme-up, be that stop quick or not-so-quick or frankly malingering.

With its functionalist architecture, realpolitik aura and an angular main room that brings to mind airplane hangars and high-school proms, Eugene's WOW Hall is not everyone's Platonic ideal of a live venue. Look past the surface, however, and the surface starts to make sense. This community centered, volunteer driven, all-ages Center for the Performing Arts — which this year hosted everything from the Meat Puppets to Ghostface Killah (pictured center), along with scads of local artists and bands — is about as hard-working and functionally cool as you can get. And when the lights dim on a packed house, the energy in that main room starts to crackle and pop like nowhere else in town. WOW puts the "live" in live music.

3. tie: Ninkasi Believer / Ninkasi Radiant www.ninkasibrewing.com

Ninkasi's aptly named Total Domination IPA is a bit like one of Raymond Chandler's dangerous femmes: It comes on strong, all tasty seduction and gorgeous complexity, only to sneak up and kick your ass in the third act. "It's the beer we wanted to drink, so it's the beer we decided to make," says co-founder Nikos Ridge of the first ale he and brewmaster Jamie Floyd unleashed on an unsuspecting public in 2006. Folks around here drink that stuff like water. So now it seems wildly prescient that this Eugene brewing company — which in just three years has pretty much taken charge of the local if not the Northwest's beer scene — opted to inaugurate their

Tiny Tavern — also endearingly known as the "Jiny Javern," or simply the Jiny — sits on the corner of Fourth and Blair like a drunken, redheaded stepchild amidst the more trendsetting establishments at the heart of the Whiteaker. A vestige of old-school Northwest blue-collar blues and as classless, rechérché and beautifully down-at-the-heels as Mos Eisley Space Port, the Jiny can be a gust of fresh beer breath when you just don't want to deal with anything but getting loaded and having an unwashed good time. Not that the Jiny ain't cool but it's cool in an unselfconscious, unconditional, downbeat way that is all too rare these days. It is the Nirvana to Sam Bond's Pearl Jam. best-kept cocktail secret

Word is starting to get around about The Rabbit: If you haven't eaten there, you really should. But you should also make time in your busy socializing and drinking schedule to go by just for the cocktails. Bartender Amy Hand has a fantastic drink list that sets classic flavors next to new concoctions that shift with the seasons and change according to what Hand is making at any given time house-made infusions and creations include fig bourbon (which makes for a fantastic old-fashioned), apple bitters. grapefruit soda, coffee liqueur and more. Hand says she likes "to make up things no one's ever had before." Her current favorite is the Harmony, which mixes gold rum, apple cider, beet juice and lime; a previous favorite involved black pepper, rhubarb, simple syrup and gin (that's one's out of production as rhubarb is out of season). "I think about the food that we serve and how complementary the flavors are that Gabe [Chef Gabriel Gill does, and I want to continue that experience for peope who want to have a cocktail with their dinner," Hand explains. As the weather cools, look for apple and fig flavors to crop up on the menu along with a few more hot drinks. And get there early for happy hour (4:30-6:30 pm weekdays, in the bar only): with a $2 cone of fries and $5 cocktails, you can delight your palate without breaking the bank. We caught Best Bartender Ty Connor after he picked up his award at last Saturday's Best of Eugene awards show and asked him for a comment - an acceptance speech, if you will — on his win. The next afternoon, the following missive arrived: "Although I am grateful to everyone who voted for me, I am quite sure there are a number of bartenders in Eugene who are more deserving of this award. On behalf of everyone in the service industry: please, ladies and gentlemen, respect your bartender, don't drink and drive, and remember to wash your hands after using the restroom. Cheers!"

We're tempted to suggest that this is why Eugeneans so like to vote Connor the best: He's a friendly, unassuming guy who passes the praise on to his colleagues and seems unflappable, even in victory.

To ensure every hunk of beef is of top-notch quality. Bates has primegrade cuts shipped in on Friday; the cuts are aged 21 days or longer in cold storage (so the micro-organisms do their work, breaking down the tendons and making it more tender) and then trimmed of excess fat and inferior meat. The new coin-op bus pass dispenser for the EMX bus route — an atavistic green doohickey that looks like a midget Sani-can from the era of Logan's Run — is easily the most foolish, fucked-up, time-wasting and utterly maddening hunk of junk foisted on an already beleaguered public by a metro authority. First off, the formerly free bus ride from Eugene to Springfield (like that old dope dealer con, "Hev, first one's on me") now costs $1.50 one way, a crappy enough development during these economic end times. But add to this bureaucratic insult a baffling, slow-moving system that, in every regard, is insidious, indecipherable and eats quarters like cops eat donuts — it's all just way too much. Never has something with less than six buttons been such an aggravating SNAFU.

The staff is friendly. the space unfussy but comfortable, all glossy wood tabletops and cozy lighting: the sushi menu is extensive, covering everything you'd expect and a bit more as well. An understanding of the culinary idiosyncrasies of barbecue can elevate the simplicity of this comfort food to ambrosia. The slow-cooked care taken to make each slab of meat delectable is apparent with every bite, and nowhere more so than at Papa's Soul Food Kitchen. The brisket, the pulled pork and the chicken sandwiches are incredible in both taste and price. The big back patio is great for cooling off outdoors and the staff is attentive, even when the place is slammed with customers. Also, check out the sides menu for great additions to the entrees. The fried okra is incredible, and you need vegetables in your diet, right?

Vero has so much going for it, from the heavy, comfortable furniture to the coffee itself. But ... we always want more. We want to be able to go there after work to, um, work on stuff, curling into a comfy chair with a book or settling in with a laptop. It closes so early. We know not everyone wants coffee after 6 pm, but we want — we really want! — more cafés that are open late. Like, until 10 or 11 pm late. There are only so many seats at the Beanery and One Cup. A Perfect Union With Tea

IF YOU ARE IN THE MOOD FOR SOMETHING REFRESHINGLY DIFFERENT. REFER TO THIS COMPATIBILITY CHART.

MANGO CEYLON - Those with dark inclinations and a lust for the mysterious will pair well with this aromatic cup. This perfumed, velvety brew enjoys a partner with a heavy palate, forceful nature, and a determined spirit. Those with delicate constitutions need not sip this enchanted tea.

FIREFLY CHAI - This inspired amber infusion is looking for someone who soars to great heights with zeal and ambition. Someone who is daring and never misses an opportunity to achieve big dreams! If you truly believe anything is possible, this charmed cup is destined for you.

CHAMOMILE - This peaceful tea is looking for a steady partner who enjoys the delights of domestic tranquility. If you enjoy an evening of classical music amongst the sputtering flames of a fireside, this tea would make the perfect companion.

JASMINE PEARLS - This graceful tea is best suited to those with an eye for elegance and a taste for grandeur. If your perfect day includes perusing art from the world's finest galleries, then certainly count on this exquisite cup to be a sophisticated partner.

HIBISCUS HIGH - If you embrace your inner child with open arms and find yourself climbing trees and making cardboard forts in the backyard, this tea will be your best friend. Sunny moments of carefree merriment will surely entice this cheery cup.

On the other hand, just look at Odysseus: Traveling around the Mediterranean makes for a happy family! From the Opal sizzle of hot saganaki to the gustatorial splendor of lamb-based special dinners, Poppi's brings on the yum in its unassuming downtown spot. For special occasions, we

It's impossible not to feel like royalty when you sup at King Estate, a restaurant that sits squarely amid a 1,000-plus acre vineyard and atop a stately rise overlooking the softly sweeping greenscape of the Lorane Valley. The chateau — with its spectacular view, spacious courtyard appointed in Santa Fe-cum-Grecian cobbles and burbling fountain is luxurious but completely welcoming; the pleated tennis set mingles easily with visitors in flip-flops and cut-offs. But it's the menu, elegant and affordable, that really distinguishes this out-of-town designation: tender cakes of Dungeness crab, juicy Alaskan halibut and messy barbecued ribs are just a few of the must-tries. It's hard to argue with any place that offers pizza and truffle oil on the same page.

You know what keeps a partnership sane? One person who feels that Yumm! Sauce is not the end-all, be-all of human taste bud existence, but who gives a liter of said sauce to the Yumm!-loving half on special occasions. You know what keeps some of the EW editorial staff sane? That's right: Carefully spaced Yumm! attacks. Whether we order a medium Hot 'n' Jazzy, an Edamame bowl with extra Yumm! Sauce, a Southwest Wrap, a Hearty Salad or some of those strangely addictive tofu sticks, the various Café Yumm! franchises deliver consistent tastiness. Café Yumm! owners donate food all over town (and Beaverton too), not to mention bonding with social media — blog! Twitter! Facebook! —and they even hosted a recent Eugene Tweetup. When we can tear ourselves away from the sauce's tantalizing combo of salt, umami and (good!) fat, Eugene stays loyal to Laughing Planet's fresh, often organic bowls and burritos of tastiness.

The riverfront bike system. Five bike bridges and miles and miles and miles of scenic, car free riverfront winding right through the middle of town make it hard to beat. In minutes downtown workers can take a lunch ride and see osprey, egrets, heron, geese, ducks, beaver dams and turtles while spinning carefree along a wild-looking river. Bike commuters can use the scenic system to zip into town. Tourists love it. With the new path through the restored Delta Ponds, new bike bridge connection being built over the freeway to north Eugene and plans and hopes to extend the bike path all the way to Mount Pisgah, the riverfront trails just keep getting better.

- 3. Café Soriah 384 W. 13th Ave. 342-4410. www.soriah.com

We've had our eye on Belly since before it opened, and we're still mesmerized. Self-described as "Rustic European Farmhouse Soul Food," Belly has simple, sound, delicious food at great prices. Owner and Chef Brendan Mahaney learned the ropes on the Eugene fine dining circuit, including Marché and Red Agave, and then hosted a supper club before choosing Eugene over Portland for his restaurant. And we're so thankful he made that choice.

The menu changes monthly, following the seasons. Belly avoids the trendy misuse of the word "tapas," thank goodness, but offers plates that range in size: appetizers, small plates and main course entrées. Like Marché, Belly offers French-influenced cuts of meat, such as pork belly, often served over lentils. Other dishes, such as the meltingly tender house specialty, pork shoulder confit, adapt French techniques. Salt cod fritters and gougères, the light cheesy buns popular in Burgundy, are also specialties.

You won't find long descriptions on the menu of particular local sources, but Willamette Valley specialties, such as Seavey Loop apples and hazelnuts in a salad, are plentiful. The confit accourtements change with the seasons: now served with fall apples and pomegranate juice, spring might bring soused cherries over polenta. November's menu will include duck confit, a chantrelle tart and a petit filet with potato, sweet potato and blue cheese gratin.

Belly stresses its lack of pretension, most recently with an advertisement that stated the restaurant was snouty, not snooty. With entrées under $20 and most small plates hovering around $10, the prices are comparable to meals at many dining establishments with more standard — even outdated — offerings.

The wine list is inventive, featuring more European selections than one might expect. For dessert, we wouldn't say no to a pumpkin pot-de-crème. But we'd probably choose another round of the bacon-wrapped, blue-cheese-stuffed Italian plums, because they are just that good.

It's hard to think of a time we couldn't go out and get a piping hot waffle as a late-night snack. But it is really less than a year since the opening of Off the Waffle, Eugene's "confection sensation," as their website states. Since then, proprietors Dave and Omer Orian have blanketed the town with free waffle samples and established a barter system — books for waffles — that appeals to thrifty individuals.

The original waffle house is actually a real house on Van Buren, complete with a billboard with Off the Waffle's iconic image (the red-headed waffle chef who resembles the brothers) and Belgian gypsy jazz piped outside. A second location, a cart in front of High Priestess tattoo parlor, doesn't quite manage to create the same atmosphere (or, at times, freshly made waffles), but its convenience to the university and late-night hours ensures a steady stream of customers.

So what's all the fuss? These small, hand-held waffles are fantastic. Based on the famous sugar waffles from the Belgian city of Liège, they are sweetened with imported pearl sugar that creates a crackly, caramelized exterior and a moist interior. After some experimentation with ingredients and waffle irons, the shop now offers several fillings, including goat cheese with berries, or chocolate chips and banana. Cardamom and pistachios often join the party. Savory combinations, such as the havarti, apple and cinnamon, don't always fare quite as well, especially when the waffle isn't warm enough to melt the cheese.

Off the Waffle sources as many ingredients locally as it can, including flour, farm-fresh eggs, Noris Dairy milk and Wandering Goat Coffee. The popularity of the waffles ensures the shop and the cart are continuously busy, and sometimes the lines get long. Enjoy the music, the books and the conversations around you while you wait.

USUALLY TREES NEED WATER. BUT SOMETIMES WATER NEEDS TREES.

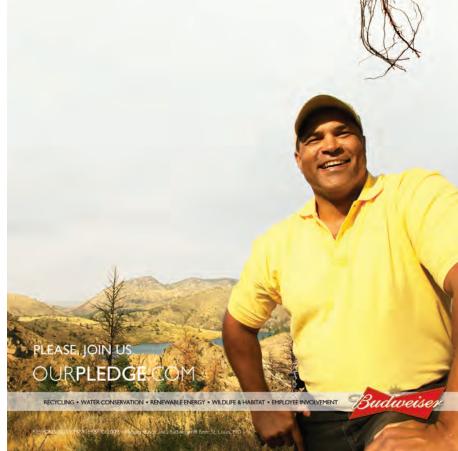

Five years ago, near our Fort Collins brewery, a forest fire threatened the Poudre River watershed. The river needs the roots of those trees to decrease runoff potential and bank erosion. This is water our whole community relies on. So, naturally, we decided to help. More than 100 employees dedicated a weekend to planting more than 1,000 trees to help recover the watershed. A small act that will grow to greater heights.

Strummin' on the old banjo is no Sunday afternoon side project for the once "wild and crazy" comedian Steve Martin. In fact, music now seems to mean more to Martin than any of his surprisingly rangy artistic endeavors (he's even written a novel, for Christ's sake). The B-side to "King Tut," Martin's million-selling novelty single of 1978, is comprised of a pair of bluegrass instrumentals and, yes, those are Martin's fingers diligently at work. Sure, you may have your funny bone tickled when Martin presents An Evening of Bluegrass & Banjo at The Shedd on Sunday, Nov. 1, but more than likely the silverhaired joker will be yanking your heartstrings instead with songs from his recent Rounder Records release, The Crow: New Songs for the Five-String Banjo. He ain't kidding aroundno more arrow through the head. Just music. For tickets, visit www.ofam.org. $43-$68.

TIX AVAIL, BY CALLING 1-800-992-TIXX

We're going to say it: John Cleese is a fucking genius. He should be knighted, at the very least – hell, if only for his "Ministry of Silly Walks" skit on Monty Python's Flying Circus, that gaspingly hilarious, wildly seditious TV, um, program that inflicted an entire generation of geeky American adolescents with the need to rehash really bad British accents. Or how about Cleese's own devilishly bad French accent in *Monty Py*thon & The Holy Grail? "I faht in your zjeneral deerection!" Ge nius. Don't miss Sir Cleese when, with his trademark aplomb, cynicism and fatalistic bawdiness, he brings A Final Wave at the World (or, The Alimony Tour, Year One) to McDonald Theatre on Wednesday. $55.

Falling Down

The Coen brothers return to their roots

A SERIOUS MAN: Written and directed by Joel and Ethan Coen. Cinematography, Roger Deakins. Music, Carter Burwell. Starring Michael Stuhlbarg, Sari Lennick, Richard Kind, Aaron Wollf, Fred Malamed and Alan Arkin. Focus Features, 2009. R. 105 minutes. $\star \star \star \star \star$

fter the cold eccentricity of Burn After Reading, the Coen brothers return with A Serious Man, a dark comedy about the trials of a Job-like figure beset with problems astonishing in number and variety. The film follows devout Jew and physics professor Larry Gopnik (Michael Stuhlbarg) as he grapples with misfortune during the summer of 1967, a transitional season for the country as well as the Gopniks themselves: son Danny (Aaron Wolff) has discovered marijuana on the eve of his bar mitzvah; daughter Sarah (Jessica McManus), when she isn't stealing from Dad's wallet, thinks only of washing her hair; Uncle Arthur (Richard Kind) is a terminal houseguest whose sebaceous cyst needs constant attention; and wife Judith (Sari Lennick) is emotionally involved with neighbor Sy Ableman (Fred Melamed), arguably the most sanctimonious "other man" ever. When Judith suggests the possibility of divorce to Larry, it tugs a thread that unravels the fabric of his life, setting in motion a profoundly philosophical and often hilarious look at finding the strength to suffer gracefully. Set in the Minneapolis suburbs of their youth, A Serious Man is the most personal Coen brothers film by far and arguably one of the best of their

At the advice of a friend, Larry consults a series of rabbis for understanding. It's a quest Larry begins half-heartedly and with great skepticism, his reluctance only deepening when a "junior" rabbi — the elder rabbi is away on business — suggests Larry seek God in a parking lot. Meanwhile, Larry's real troubles are proliferating, each encroachment rupturing his once-ordered life and setting him up for humiliations galore.

For example, as his tenure is up for review, he finds a cash gift on his desk, a possible bribe from a Korean student who, when questioned by a mortified Larry, urges him to "accept the mystery" of the situation. At home, Uncle Arthur can't be pried from the family bathroom, but that's nothing compared to his increasingly frequent runins with the police; meanwhile, Larry's neighbor annexes part of the Gopnik lawn as his own, as if enacting a suburban version of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Larry's finances, already in trouble, are being sunk into the divorce, while at work he's being harassed by an agent for the Columbia Records club, a service his son has enrolled them in sub rosa. Eventually, Larry is so fragile that a knock at the door could break him to pieces. So he does what any self-respecting suburbanite would do: He takes to his roof, where he watches his beautiful neighbor sunbathing naked.

The rooftop visit, ostensibly to adjust the TV aerial, is a moment of sublime beauty. Is Larry taking his last breath before a plunge? Or is he regrouping, gathering the strength to press on? As it turns out, things start looking up for him, so to speak. "Do you take advantage of the new freedoms?" his neighbor whispers while producing a joint, at which point Larry's face wrenches into a mask of bemused delight. Danny's bar mitzvah is a trope of pure comedy perfection, the son stoned, the parents clueless and the spiritual community immensely pleased with itself. Even achieving tenure begins to seem like a possibility for Larry. Then, out of the blue, the phone rings.

The material in A Serious Man is as mature as it is complicated, a fact that no doubt contributed to casting the Tony-award winning Stuhlbarg as the lead. Stuhlbarg has an uncanny ability to express injustice, fatigue and exasperation without eliciting the same reactions in the audience. I was spellbound by his performance along with those of the actors who portray his family, the balance of whom were cast locally in Minneapolis, a move that gives their scenes an intangible credibility.

A Serious Man occasionally is a little overdone — the film is preceded by a long enactment of a ghost story at a shtetl — and some plot points are simply abandoned, an overconfidence I haven't seen since The Sopranos was in top form. Roger Deakins, arguably the best cinematographer working today, is again on hand to enhance the Coens' formalism with elegant simplicity. If there is a more artful closing image this year than the final frame of A Serious Man, I'd like to know about it. ew

A Serious Man opens Friday, Oct. 30, at the Bijou.

Hockey vs. Natalie Portman's Shaved Head

The Seattle-Portland rivalry is something that I, as one of the evil transplants who selfishly moved to the Northwest from a culturally devoid place in pursuit of a more artistically rich existence, have never really understood. Both cities have their distinct set of merits and flaws, but I've always felt that when it comes to the question of which city's music scene is better, it's a draw: Both places have spawned and continue to spawn incredibly talented, seminal artists. But when it comes to which of the two cities' synth-pop buzz bands I think will hit the big time first – Portland's Hockey or Seattle band Natalie Portman's Shaved Head – I must betray my current geographic location and predict that Hockey will blow up first. Even though they're a solid year behind NPSH in terms of debut album release dates, and even though they're technically opening up the show.

Let's start with first impressions. Hockey is a punchy, two-syllable name that's easy to remember. Natalie Portman's Shaved Head is a very long (and honestly, kind of stupid) name for a band that plays synth-pop, the unofficial soundtrack of (for?) ADD-addled kids everywhere. Secondly, while NPSH's self-titled debut is a solidly catchy, hilarious selection of fun songs intended for the dance floor, the band's jokey lyrics are lighthearted to a fault. There just aren't any real feelings behind the fun. It's a problem that plagues otherwisesolid electronic music, one that has always kept me from leaving pop territory and checking out real, unadulterated electronica. Simply put, NPSH's songs are missing the emotive aspect of music that keeps you spinning a record long after the novelty of its newness wears off: because it makes you feel something other than the desire to shake your ass and get laid.

Hockey, on the other hand, manages to write goofy songs that also make you want to shake it like a maraca, but there's a pop aspect to the music – think part New Wave dance jam, part '80s power ballad – that endows Hockey's songs (some of them, anyway) with the real emotional substance that makes pop music, well, popular. No matter who hits first, though, there's no question that we'll be seeing plenty more press on both bands in the near future. Seeing these guys for free is not an opportunity to be squandered. Natalie Portman's Shaved Head, Hockey and Chilly Willy play at 9 pm Friday, Oct. 30, at the EMU Ballroom, UO. Free. – Sara Brickner

Party Down With Crazy Engine

Melvin Seals last came to town on a warm summer night not too long ago: Seals and JGB closed the Eugene Celebration on Sept. 5. This time, he's swinging by with Steve Kimock Crazy Engine. Kimock's storied career spans more than three decades, since joining Keith and Donna Godchaux's post-Grateful Dead project the Heart of Gold Band with drummer Greg Anton. In 1984, along with Anton and Quicksilver Messenger Service's John Cipollina, Kimock founded the group Zero, which has become one of the quintessential San Fran jam bands.

Kimock's latest project, Crazy Engine, includes Seals, his son John Morgan Kimock on drums, and bassist and vocalist Trevor Exter, well-known as a unique cello player in the NYC indie music scene. The combination of youth, experience and innovation creates a fresh twist on Kimock's already singular approach to rock. Kimock is able to pull together disparate influences of folk, jazz, jam, bluegrass, psychedelia and rock, and turn it into something all his own – this time, all bound together with Seals' organ flourishes.

Kimock calls Crazy Engine an "up-beat, gospel influenced, soul-rock band." In a press release, Kimock says "The country is all screwed up and I have a theory about how you get through that, you party. You show up and you put on a happy face and you get a bunch of people together and you just slam it down." Sound good? Yeah, thought you'd like that. Steve Kimock Crazy Engine plays at 8 pm Friday, Oct. 30, at McDonald Theatre.

Hell and Back

Seasonal sounds and more

t's All Hallows Eve, and you wanna see something REALLY scary? Way too many cool music events in town and insufficient time and space to see them — or even adequately preview them here. But this column's act of compression pales in comparison to what playwright Tim McIntosh, composer McKenzie Stubbert and designers Josiah Martens, Wes Hurd and Noah Crabtree have created: a multimedia reduction of Dante's entire Divine Comedy — no, not just the Inferno, but all three volumes of the most celebrated epic of the Middle Ages - into about an hour. Starting at 6, 7:15 and 8:30 pm on Oct. 30 and 31 at Gutenberg College, audiences will be able to follow Dante and his guide, Virgil, from hell to heaven.

Other fun musical Halloweenery includes the PipeScreams on Oct. 30 at First United Methodist Church (14th & Olive), in which a fright of local organists plays scary classical music, and Mood Area 52's annual live twisted tango instrumental accompaniment to F.W. Murnau's classic vampire flick Nosferatu at Sam Bond's on Oct. 29. Then you can repent all those sins the next afternoon by bringing canned goods for Food for Lane County to First Methodist, and being rewarded with an All Saints concert featuring Faure's soothing Requiem and music by Viere and Verdi.

Another centuries-old Italian trilogy - paintings by a Renaissance master painter — inspired the ever-retro-looking Ottorino Respighi to write an orchestral suite named Three Botticelli Pictures. which the Oregon Mozart Players will perform in their Nov. 7-8 concerts at the Hult Center's Soreng Theater. But the more welcome news is the chamber orchestra's commissioning composer John Musto to orchestrate his song cycle Quiet Songs, and they're bringing the composer and his wife, soprano Amy Burton, to perform in the world premiere of this version. Musto will also be the soloist in Mozart's first great Piano Concerto, K. 271. Musto and Burton will also play cabaret songs in a dinner performance at Actors Cabaret of Eugene on Nov. 3.

Over at the UO's Beall Hall, the school's own faculty members are playing a couple of highly recommended concerts. The Columbia Piano Trio, featuring UO profs Fritz Gearhart and David Riley on violin and piano, respectively, along with Eugene Symphony cellist Andrew Kolb, play trios by Mozart, Mendelssohn and Frank Bridge on Nov. 8. Then on Nov. 10, pianist Alexandre Dossin and other UO faculty (including the Oregon String Quartet) play an all-Villa Lobos program including one of the Brazilian composer's Bachianas Brasileiras, his fourth string quartet and more. UO students play some great American music for winds on Nov. 3, including works by Aaron Copland, Charles Ives and Leonard Bernstein. And on Nov. 7, a former UO student, pianist James Miley, leads his jazz quartet Bug in a concert in room 190 at the UO music

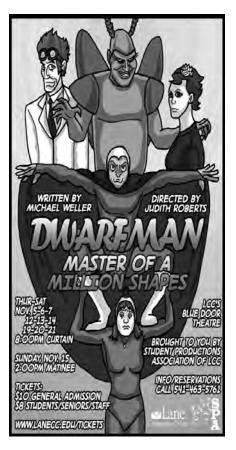

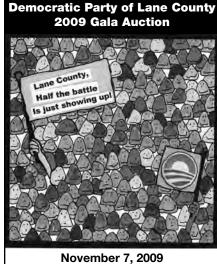

Speaking of jazz, at Davis's Restaurant and Bar on Oct. 29, Trio Subtonic, one of Portland's coolest jazzish bands, celebrates its splendid new release, Cave Dwellers, which takes their irresistibly groovy music in slightly more laid back yet musically ambitious directions. Yet Galen Clark (keyboards), Bill Athens (basses) and Jesse Brooke (percussion) retain the odd meter funk and frequent Brazilian rhythms that make the group appeal as much to jam banders, dance clubbers and even world music fans as to jazzheads.

Real Brazilian jazz arrives at the Shedd on Nov. 6 with the pianist/flutist/composer Jovino Santos Neto and his quintet, whose breezy, sophisticated sounds blend folk and jazz elements. Fans of both jazz and world music should really give this sunny sleeper concert a try. The Shedd brings still another fine international jazzer, sultry Chilean chanteuse Claudia Acuña, on Nov. 8. She's played with George Benson, Tom Harrell, Arturo O'Farrill and lots of other jazz stars, and you don't need to habla Español to understand why; she's an enticing singer who can appeal to fans of old time pop and AOR as well jazz types. Neither of these Shedd performers is as well known as they should — and will be, but both are well worth checking out.

A couple of other world music shows will warm up November. On Nov. 6, the local youth marimba band Hokoyo gives its final performance to benefit AIDS orphans in Zimbabwe. If you cut out a little early, you can catch the latest inheritor of the late, great Fela Kuti's great political Afrobeat legacy. We've long been treated to visits by the major West Coast (Aphrodesia) and East Coast (Albino!) American Felacolytes, and now Joe's Bar & Grill brings the Midwest version: Chicago Afrobeat Project, which mixes horn-goosed jazz and rock with the usual funk and African strains.

Spooky Spectacles of Tunes and Terror

Halloween events around town

ere we go again: another Halloween in Eugene! As always, the local venues to see and be seen in are throwing their bashes long into the night with lots of great showings from local talent, musical and otherwise.

Returning for another year to the McDonald Theatre on Halloween night, Reeble Jar brings their jazzy, funky sound to costumed geeks and freaks looking to shake their money-makers. These guys rocked the McD at the Best of Eugene show and are sure to do so again (10 pm 10/31, $5/$10, all ages).

Do you like Ween? Do you like tribute bands? Well, you're in luck: Boy's Club, an all-Ween tribute band from Salem, will be playing Luckey's on Halloween (10 pm 10/31, $5-$8, 21+). Don't forget to wear a costume! Maybe if you dress up like "Fat Lenny," you can get a shout-out from the band.

Diablo's Downtown Lounge hosts its usual Halloween party, but this year the M-80s (10 pm 10/31, free, 21+) will be rocking the house late into the night with their best of the 1980s music set.

The District, in tandem with Coffee for Canines, is putting on its First Annual Downtown Halloween Costume Pooch Parade to benefit dogs who need lifesaving surgeries (11 am 10/31, $10 for first dog/second dog is free, all ages). Later that night, the District hosts a Dance Party with DJ Phoenix (10 pm 10/31, free, 21+). This is a costume party, so don't forget to wear a costume that you can move in. Has anybody tried dressing up like a Fly Girl from In Living Color? It makes for a great last-minute costume to party in. Especially if you're a guy.

Upstairs at the Vet's club you'll find the acid rock band SuperTrout featuring The Merry Pranksters (9 pm 10/31, $10). People in a hippie costume (or even if it's not a costume) need to make their way to this show. SuperTrout have a rotating onstage crew that have included some of the best players from all over Oregon, including Rich Sellars, Tim Donahue, Glenn Leonard and Paul Biondi. To further the psychedelic experience, Sweet Lights will be putting on a light show. The opener for the show will be a band with arguably the funniest name in the world, Brown Chicken Brown Cow String Band.

Cozmic Pizza hosts the 14th annual Witches' Ball for those looking for a spiritual experience on this Samhain season (7 pm 10/31, $7-$10 or $5 with two cans of food, all ages). The event features children's activities early in the evening (so little tykes can get to bed on time), and the theme for the night's event is vampires, but any costume is fine. DJ Decker will be providing tunes until closing, and Forbidden Fruit will be doing the "Time Warp" live on stage. There will also be a ritual of reflection about the season and sabbat, including deep meditation. Attendees can also expect the traditional spiral dance and a dance performance by Serafina.

Rock and costumes are no strangers to one another (just ask Kiss, Alice Cooper or Marilyn Manson). And that's why the Halloween Party at the Axe and Fiddle in Cottage grove with The Harmed Brothers, Anticipate Pie and Donald 5 Pennies (9 pm 10/31, $5, 21+) makes so much sense. Jam out with these indie rockers until the costume contest at 11 pm where there will be prizes to win!

For Corvallis residents, Musicafe Rock School is kicking things off early with their 3rd Annual Rockin' Haunted House (3 pm 10/30, pet food don., all ages). There will be live bands playing and a dance to Michael Jackson's "Thriller," complete with zombies dancing out of a rock star graveyard.

These events and others will be going on around the Eugene area on Halloween. Check the nightlife and calendar listings for more spooky and shocking shows! EW

Elbow Sex

An exclusive interview with two Transylvanian sex hounds nding a 15 year-long tradition, Actors Cabaret of Eugene will hang up the spangled G-string after this weekend's performance of The Rocky Horror Show. In honor of the glorious, glitzy swan song, I managed to nab an interview with two of the characters, asking the questions you've always wanted to. Here's how it went down:

I perch on the edge of the dusty stage in the ACE Annex, surrounded by old costumes and the next show's props. Before me lounge two men in impossibly high heels and fishnet stockings, eyeing me suspiciously.

"I can't imagine what you want to ask," drawls Frank-n-Furter (phenomenal Michael P Watkins) wearing his signature black bustier and spangley, thongy thingy. Riff-Raff (15-year veteran Gerald Walters) in his super short silver space suit and sparkly silver wig only raises his white eyebrows further past his red rimmed eyes.

On stage. Frank-n-Furter comes off as just another ego-maniacal cross dresser from outer space, but up close, there really is something about him. Intriguing and horrifying, like Ivan the Terrible in a pink teddy, offering you a glass of champagne. Riff-Raff may be less attractive, but he's still packing his ray gun. I steel my courage. I have valid questions, not to mention the added advantage of being the only one in the room wearing pants.

I begin with a toughie: "Who do you think is hotter, Brad or Janet?"

"Oh, Brad" Frank purrs without so much as a blink. Really?

"I'll take Janet," ripostes Riff-Raff, ever the contrarian. With Riff-Raff on the topic, I take the opportunity to ask, "What, exactly, does elbow sex feel like?"

Riff explains that it is something far more pleasurable than any human can imagine. When I ask if Transylvanians have extra nerve endings or apparatus in their forearms, he informs me that it's not about nerve endings — it's all in the technique. I question his relationship with his tongueflicking, soul-singing sister Magenta. Big mistake on my part.

"What is incest?" he demands, offended. "We have no concept of incest on our planet," Frank-N-Furter patiently explains to me.

"No concept of incest?" I kinda feel like this is a concept worth having.

"No" Frank leans back dramatically with a shake of his head, "We do 'em all."

I decide to play on the latent fear within Frank-N-Furter's narcissism. "Has anyone ever been repulsed by you?"

"No. Not that I'm aware of. If they were, I'd kill them'

Riff leans forward; although he is nowhere near my ear, I can feel his whisper as he says, "I am. I am repulsed by him."

"Did you two never ...?"

"Never."

"He's just a servant," Frank-n-Furter says. I change the topic.

'So, Frank. You made a monster."

"I've made several. Rocky was my first success "

"Several?"

"I made Eddie."

"You made Eddie?"

"Well, not from scratch," he admits. "But Rocky is my own creation." Here he sighs, 'Then Rocky failed, too'

And suddenly we were at the crux of it all: Frank's sense of betrayal at Rocky's tryst with Janet. He really meant to create something special in his relationship with young monster Rocky. It leads me to wonder if there might be more to Frank's moral philosophy than "Yes." Studying the two creatures before me, I know full well that I will never again have the opportunity to interview transsexuals from Transylvania. "Do you have any moral philosophy you'd like your audience to leave with?'

Frank-N-Furter graces me with a smile,

"Don't dream it, be it. That's what we've always believed in. Pleasure." Here Riff nods in agreement. Frank continues, "We tried to create a society where all give themselves over to absolute pleasure. We failed."

I suppose in a town where many of us consider a double latte "giving ourselves over to pleasure," Frank-N-Furter's cause was doomed from the start. We're just too different. They are from a world that dwells on pleasure, we from one mired in

Have more questions? Ask them yourself. The Rocky Horror Show runs through Oct. 31 at ACE. Tix at actorscabaret. org or 683-4368.

If you are looking for a fun friendly, and sweet new best friend, come meet Kane!vear-old pit bull mix. Kane will make a great addition to ar active family. He is looking for new home that will match his energetic spirit. A cat free home would be best for Kane because he isn't quite sure how to make friends with them. He may also need some extra ttention when meeting other dogs and he does not have experience being around kids younger than 10 years-old. This sweet and playful guy is waiting here at Greenhill Humane Society for a new family where he will fit right in. Come see him today and you will fall in love with his cute face and adorable personality.

free will astrology BY ROB BREZSNY

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may be as flooded with briny emotion as a Pisces on a meandering binge. You might be as embedded in a labyrinth of your own creation as the Geminis who verge on being too clever for their own good. You may be as cagey a listener as a Scorpio who's searching for a hidden vulnerability in an ally. In other words, Aries, you're not exactly yourself. But it's one of those rare times when that's a good thing. Halloween costume suggestion: the opposite of what you think you are.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): In my ideal version of Halloween, we wouldn't scare ourselves with images of ghoulish skeletons, eyeballs floating in cauldrons, and hissing, three-headed snakes. Rather, we'd confront more realistic fears, like the possibility that the effects we have on the world are different from our intentions ... or that we have not yet reached our potential ... or that people we like might completely misread and misunderstand us. Then Halloween would serve a more spiritually useful purpose. It would bring us face-to-face with actual dangers to our psychic integrity, whereupon we could summon our brilliant courage and exorcize the hell out of them. Costume suggestion: exorcist. (Begin by exorcising yourself.)

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): During this phase of your cycle, you'll generate good fortune if you brainstorm and meditate about your relationship with work. I urge you to empty your mind of everything you think you know about the subject. Adopt a fresh and innocent perspective. Here are some questions to prime your investigations. 1. What's the quality of the experience you want to have as you earn a living? 2. What gifts do you want to give to life as you toil at challenging tasks that are interesting to you? 3. What capacities do you want to develop in yourself while doing your work? (P.S. For your Halloween costume, why not pretend you're doing your dream job?)

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Israeli poet Yehuda Amichai (1924-2000) witnessed the full range of experiences that life on this planet has to offer, from war to love and everything in between. During an interview he gave in Jerusalem in 1994, he said, "I can stand on my balcony and tell my children, 'Over there I was shelled for the first time, and over there, to the right, just beneath those trees, I was kissed for the first time.'" I suspect his words will soon be meaningful for you, Cancerian. It's likely you'll have a breakthrough or epiphany near a place where you once suffered disappointment. Halloween costume suggestion: the phoenix.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Author Gary Smalley says that the sexual nature of men is like a microwave oven, while women resemble a crockpot, the device that cooks food at low heat for a long time. Right about now, I'd advise you Leo men to be like crockpots not only in the bedroom but everywhere else, too. To spot the subtle opportuni ties that will be available, you'll have to be gradual, deliberate, and thorough, Leisurely foreplay should be your all-purpose metaphor. As for you Leo women: I'm betting there are ways that you have fallen under the sway of the microwave meme. If I'm right, it's time to fully re-embrace the spirit of the crockpot. Halloween costume clues: the tortoise, not the hare; a 400-page novel, not Twitter; the Pyramid of Khufu, not a sandcastle.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): "The more beautiful the bird, the poorer the singer," wrote L. M. Boyd, "Peacocks scream, macaws screech, Birds of Paradise croak." Among the most interesting singers, on the other hand, are birds that are far less spectacular in appearance; the black-capped chickadee, the willow thrush, and the white-throated sparrow. Keep that in mind as you navigate your way through the coming week's dilemmas. My personal inclination is to favor inspiring singing over comely appearance, but you may have a different bias. The important thing is to recognize the nature of the options before you. Halloween costume suggestion: Incorporate the themes of plain eauty, secret genius, disguised power, and open secrets.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): At a family planning conference in Beijing, a researcher from Ghana presented testimony about tribal issues that he had in part gleaned through interviews with dead ancestors. He said that spirit mediums had acted as his "translators." When he was met with skepticism from colleagues, he was defensive. "If I only heard from the living," he explained, "I wouldn't get a very good balance." His perspective would be smart for you to adopt right now, Libra. To make the wisest decisions and take the most righteous action, draw inspiration from what has passed away as much as from what's alive and in your face. Halloween costume suggestion: a spirit medium.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): "Behind every face, there are a thousand faces," says film director Bryan Singer, who worked on two of the X-Men movies. He deals with professional actors, who specialize in revealing the myriad faces beneath the surface. But I think his assessment applies to lots of people, especially you Scorpios – although it must be said that you do have mad skills at hiding all the action going on beneath your surface. This Halloween, I urge you to make a break with tradition and show five or six of the real yous lurking below your poker face. Costume suggestion: be inspired by Joseph Campbell's "hero with a thousand faces."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The Da Vinci Code author Dan Brown has a unique way of stimulating his imagination: He dons his gravity boots and meditates on complex storylines while he's inverted It's also a good way to overcome writer's block, "You think differently upside-down," he says. Do you have an equivalent method for providing gentle shock therapy to your perspective, Sagittarius? This is a good time to use it. If you don't already have a creative aid like that, hunt around for one. In the days ahead, it will come in handy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): When Sheelah Ryan won $55 million in the Florida lottery, she used the money to create an organization dedicated to helping the disadvantaged. "I guess I've disappointed a lot of people," she told a reporter. "I could be traveling all over the world, or have a beautiful mansion on the ocean, or have a chauffeurdriven Rolls-Royce. But that's not my style." She's your role model for the coming weeks, Capricorn. When good fortune comes to you – and I'm almost positive it will – I recommend that you look for ways to share it. The ironic fact of the matter is that if you're generous as you tap in to your gift, there'll be more of the gift.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): When I did a performance in Santa Fe a few years ago, a woman in the audience came up to me after the show and made a sardonic proposal: Would I like to join her 12-step program for writers who are overly fond of vivid adjectives and adverbs? With all the uppity mock politeness I could summon, I told her that I was preposterously happy with my scintillating addiction to brazen language, and didn't regard it as a raggedy problem that needed invasive correcting. Now I'm advising you to be like me and follow your heart when it tells you to be bigger, bolder, and brasher than ever before. Right now, shiny intensity is your sacred duty! Halloween costume suggestion: the sun.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): I hope you won't merely wander around the frontier. I hope you'll undertake a meticulous yet expansive exploration of that virgin territory. Here are some tips on how to proceed: 1. Formulate specific questions about what you're looking for 2. Develop a hypothesis for the experiments you want to carry out. 3. Ignore what doesn't interest you and pounce only on what stirs your fascination. Halloween costume suggestion: an alien anthropologist visiting Earth from another planet; a time-traveler from the future who's doing a documentary on this historical moment; a religious pilgrim who's keeping a detailed journal.

HOMEWORK: What is your greatest fear? Make fun of it this Halloween. Tell me about it at my Facebook page: http://tinyurl.com/nkay2n.

Savage Love

WORDS OF PURE WISDOM by Dan Savage

I'm a 67-year-old woman, almost 68, who has been married four times – once widowed (with three kids in their 40s who've turned out pretty well), divorced three times. I recently met someone online: 48, a wealthy, educated man with two boys, 12 and 14. He lives the cuckoldt lifestyle and is looking for a woman to marry who would participate and enjoy this with him. He says he "craves and needs" this lifestyle, and from what he's said so far, the boys have been trained from an early age to also live this lifestyle and would require that the woman he marries include them in all ways.

I've done some research and think I could be quite happy being a dominant. However, my concern is that he wants me to be sexual with the boys. He says that at home they practice familial nudity. He also wants me to take each one to a hotel on their respective birthdays (he doesn't say at what age) and take their virginities. He has also suggested that, once we are living together, if I wake up horny I should go to one of the boys' rooms and "grind my cunt into his face and fuck the boy." I think this is excessive and could traumatize the boys. I don't know if this type of extreme behavior is just fantasy for him or if he is serious.

If I like this man after meeting him, I would consider this lifestyle, but with boundaries where the boys are concerned. As the dominant, what I say goes, no questions asked (he has agreed to this in a recent IM), but I think we need to find a balance.

I'm interested in your thoughts on all of this. Thank you.

New To Cuckholdting

What do I think? I'm thinking - and hoping and praying - that this letter is complete bullshit. And I think I'm gonna go boil my laptop after writing this response. And I think I'm tempted to forward your email on to the police. And I think I would do just that if I wasn't convinced that this man with whom you've been corresponding – assuming you exist, NTC – is just another creepy pervert furiously beating off in front of a computer as he spins out his insanely creepy sexual fantasies for a gullible online audience of one.

But two details lead me to believe that there could actually be a four-times-married, thrice-divorced, once-widowed moral bankrupt out there receiving emails and IMs from a man who claims to be into "the cuckoldt lifestyle," "familial nudity," and the sexual abuse of his adolescent children: your age and your inability to spell "cuckold." If a creep with child-rape fantasies wrote this letter, NTC, you wouldn't be 67 going on 68 with reservations. You would be 37 at the most with DD breasts, and you would've spelled cuckold correctly. (Unless ... sigh ... the creep was into intergenerational sex and lousy spellers on top of everything else.)

Now: If this man and his children exist, NTC, he's abusing his children and they should be removed from his home immediately. He's scum, NTC, as is any woman who would for a moment contemplate shacking up with this piece of shit. Because, again, what your Interwebs friend describes is not the "cuckoldt lifestyle," it's the rape and systematic sexual abuse of children. A man who is into cuckolding gets off on his wife having consensual sex with other adult men, not his children; a woman into cuckolding gets off on "cheating" on her husband with other adult men, not her minor stepchildren.

Once again for the record: I don't think this guy is for real or that these kids exist. I think some creepy pervert is sitting in front of a computer furiously rubbing 'em out as he chats with you. Interacting with someone on the web who believes that he's telling the truth - someone who believes that he's wealthy, educated and has two boys at home anxious to be sexually abused by a woman old enough to be their grandmother – turns him on. And so he lurks online until he lands someone gullible and morally bereft enough to buy in. Okay! Let's end with a note about standards and practices here at Savage Love: I typically change identifying details in a letter – exact ages, number of divorces, number of children lest someone inadvertently out themselves to their family and friends. I didn't do that in NTC's case, because I'm praying to God that - if NTC exists - one of her children sees this letter and recognizes dear ol' Mom. And if her kids are reading: Hey, guys, it's time to take Mom's car keys, credit cards and computer away. Dementia has set in, or Mom's been demented all along. Either way, she's a danger to herself and others, and you might want to stage an intervention

I am in desperate need. I have been dating a guy for two years. We're both 25, and we love each other a lot. He's sexy as hell (half Asian, quarter Native, quarter black - he's divine), we connect, he's funny, upbeat and honest. Unfortunately, we have a recurring fight (once or twice a month), and I wonder if we will ever resolve this issue. He likes the attention of other women. The fight goes like this: He will do something borderline inappropriate with some chick right in front of me (most recently, he had 30 consecutive drunk-posts on Facebook with some 19-yearold he met through his roommate), and I will get pissed and hurt. I approach him calmly and say that it feels disrespectful and I hope that one day we will come to an agreement on this issue. He swears that it is all in my head and that I work myself up over nothing. But he KNOWS it hurts my feelings, and my hurt is made worse because he is disregarding my feelings. He usually gets mad, says he "didn't do anything wrong" and he "can't talk to me anymore," and then I won't hear from him for a day or so.

I have friends telling me that this is a deal breaker and that I am being emotionally abused. I don't know if I believe that - I think he just needs to work on boundaries. I just had a "come to Jesus" talk with the boy, and he still feels like he didn't cross any lines and refuses to apologize. But to make me feel guilty, he said he will "never post anything on another girl's Facebook page ever again." That's not what I wanted. Now my face hurts from crying, and I want someone sane to tell me which way is up. Whose side are you on? I would actually be happier if you told me that I was crazy and controlling, because altering my own attitude is a lot easier than trying to get through to him.

Hurting In Oregon

Ah ... a nice, normal problem to cleanse the palate after the shit sandwich that opens the column this week.

I'm not on anyone's side in this dispute, HIO. You sound like an insecure, passive-aggressive guilt tripper, and the boyfriend sounds like an inconsiderate flirt. You've been having the same fight twice a month for two years. Enough already. If the sex, the connection and his racebased divinity don't compensate for the flirting, end this relationship. If they do, HIO, stay with him – but only if you can stop policing his interactions with other women and stop bitching about the flirting to him, to your friends, and to me
